Death Is Only the Beginning

“The hidden cults to which these witches belonged often guarded and handed down surprising secrets from elder, forgotten aeons; and it was by no means impossible that Keziah had actually mastered the art of passing through dimensional gates.”

– H. P. Lovecraft, The Dreams in the Witch House

The Circle Undone is a campaign for Arkham Horror: The Card Game for 1–4 players. The Circle Undone deluxe expansion contains a prologue scenario, “Disappearance at the Twilight Estate,” and two full scenarios: “The Witching Hour” and “At Death’s Doorstep.” These scenarios can be played on their own or combined with the six Mythos Packs in The Circle Undone cycle to form a larger nine-part campaign.

Additional Rules and Clarifications

Tarot Slot

Tarot slots are a new type of asset slot introduced in this expansion. The following symbol indicates that an asset fills a tarot slot:

1 tarot slot

As with other slots, tarot slots limit the number of asset cards of that slot type an investigator is permitted to have in play simultaneously. By default, an investigator has only one tarot slot available.

All other rules governing slots apply to tarot slots, as usual.

Haunted

Haunted is a new ability that appears on some locations. Each time an investigator fails a skill test while investigating a location, after applying all results for that skill test, that investigator must resolve all “Haunted –” abilities on that location.

A location is “haunted” for the purposes of other card effects if it has at least one “Haunted –” ability (printed or otherwise).

Alert

Each time an investigator fails a skill test while attempting to evade an enemy with the “alert” keyword, after applying all results for that skill test, that enemy performs an attack against the evading investigator. An enemy does not exhaust after performing an alert attack. This attack occurs whether the enemy is engaged with the evading investigator or not.

Prologue Investigators

The four investigator cards depicted here (Gavriella Mizrah, Jerome Davids, Penny White, and Valentino Rivas) are marked with the Disappearance at the Twilight Estate encounter set icon and can only be used in the prologue for The Circle Undone. They cannot be used in other scenarios. Keep them with the rest of the scenario cards for Disappearance at the Twilight Estate, and do not integrate them into your collection of player cards.
Story Cards

Story cards are a new card type in The Circle Undone campaign. These cards serve as an avenue for additional narrative and typically appear as the reverse side of another scenario card. When you are instructed to resolve a story card, simply read its story text and resolve its game text.

Joe’s “Hunch Deck”

As a private eye, Joe Diamond has learned to follow his instincts, and therefore he has a separate hunch deck, which is constructed during step 4 of the setup of each scenario. The cards in this hunch deck are chosen from Joe’s 40-card deck and therefore count toward his total deck size. With the exception of these setup instructions, all references to Joe’s “deck” refer to Joe’s standard investigator deck and not his hunch deck. Joe’s hunch deck has no discard pile; cards from your hunch deck are discarded to your standard discard pile when played.

Expansion Icon

The cards in The Circle Undone campaign can be identified by this symbol before each card’s collector number:

Campaign Setup

To set up The Circle Undone campaign, perform the following steps in order.

1. Choose difficulty level.
2. Assemble the campaign chaos bag.
   - Easy (I want to experience the story):
     +1, +1, 0, 0, 0, –1, –1, –2, –3, 🕰, 🕖, 🕗.
   - Standard (I want a challenge):
     +1, 0, 0, –1, –1, –2, –2, –3, –4, 🕰, 🕖, 🕗, 🕘.
   - Hard (I want a true nightmare):
     0, 0, –1, –1, –2, –2, –3, –4, –5, 🕰, 🕖, 🕗, 🕘.
   - Expert (I want Arkham Horror):
     0, –1, –1, –2, –2, –3, –4, –6, –8, 🕰, 🕖, 🕗, 🕘.

You are now ready to begin at the prologue.

Prologue (Scenario 0):
Disappearance at the Twilight Estate

Sunday, November 22nd, 1925. Arkham, Massachusetts.

Though All Hallows’ Eve is nearly a month past, a grim melancholy lingers throughout the town. Each morning, a thick fog permeates the streets. Nights are beginning to grow longer, and if you ask around town, you’ll hear people swear that it’s getting darker, too. But despite the gloomy mood, progress continues in the sleepy town of Arkham. The election of Nathaniel Rhodes to the United States Senate has upstanding members of the community feeling optimistic about the town’s future. And tonight, at his well-appointed estate in French Hill, a man named Josef Meiger hosts the Silver Twilight Lodge’s charity gala, an annual members-only event that will turn deadly for several attendees...

Each player must choose one of the following neutral investigators to control for the duration of this prologue: Gavriella Mizrah, Jerome Davids, Penny White, or Valentino Rivas. Throughout this prologue, you will play through this character’s story and make choices that will determine his or her fate. Your choice of investigator has no direct effect on your standard investigator deck, though the results of the prologue will influence the story.

Do not assemble an investigator deck for any neutral investigator. Instead, gather the cards listed on its reverse side—these cards will be used in that investigator’s unique setup. (All listed cards are level 0 unless otherwise noted.)

If there are 3 or fewer players in the campaign, in the “Missing Persons” section of your Campaign Log, cross off the profiles of any of the neutral investigators who were not chosen.

Proceed to Intro.
Intro: “Ladies and gentlemen,” Josef Meiger announces, raising a glass of champagne in a toast. A hush descends on the room, until only the crackle of the fireplace and whispers of gossip can be heard. “Allow me to welcome you all into my home for this year’s charity gala. We have some very upstanding citizens here tonight, and I thank all of you for your hard work and generosity.” Cheers and murmurs of agreement fill the room. Many of the guests raise their glasses to Valentino, one of the most esteemed members of the Lodge this year, who sits at the Guest of Honor table, which is nearest to the fireplace.

Josef’s assistant, Jerome, blends into the wall behind Josef, discreetly checking his pocket watch. In another corner of the room, the head housekeeper, Penny, walks from table to table, filling empty glasses and collecting dirty salad plates. “Each of you has done great deeds in the name of the Silver Twilight Lodge and our historic city,” Josef continues. “Next year, we will continue to shoulder this burden and do what must be done for the sake of progress.” Jerome steps forward quietly, interrupting Josef’s speech with the unassuming confidence that comes from years of trusted service. He taps Josef lightly on his shoulder and shows him the time. “I’m afraid I am already out of time. Thank you all very much for attending,” Josef concludes, bowing. Polite applause rises from the audience, and Josef walks briskly toward the parlor, followed closely by his assistant. Two servants collect coats as latecomers trickle into the manor, and Gavriella—Josef’s head of security—watches closely by his assistant. Two servants collect coats as latecomers trickle into the manor, and Gavriella—Josef’s head of security—watches over the entrance with hard eyes and a clenched jaw. “Has Mr. Sanford arrived?” Josef asks curtly, tapping his polished leather shoe on the floor.

“I’m afraid not,” Jerome replies, flipping through the last pages of the estate’s guest book. “But he should be here any minute, Mr. Meiger.”

“Good. I want there to be no problems whatsoever when he arrives; am I understood?” Josef calls out to Gavriella: “Make sure he is well protected.” Gavriella nods, patting the handle of her.45 in her shoulder holster. Josef turns his attention back to his assistant. “And have Penny make sure the main course is kept good and hot while we wait for Mr. Sanford’s arrival. Not a single slice is to be served without his presence.”

“Not even for Mr. Rivas, sir?” Jerome asks, glancing at Josef over the rim of his thick glasses. Josef pauses for a moment, considering.

“Pour Mr. Rivas another glass of champagne, and I am sure he will not complain. Also, I’m still waiting on those accounts I asked you about earlier today. Don’t forget,” Josef says, clapping his assistant on the shoulder before walking back into the banquet hall. Jerome nods obediently and heads upstairs.

Soon after, the dark mist would appear, and nothing would be the same.
You adjust your glasses and lean forward as you turn to the page regarding Mr. Meiger’s request. Some of the names on the list you recognize: Rivas, Gensler, Fairmont, Rhodes, Wick. But many are names you have never heard of before, let alone seen affiliated with Mr. Meiger’s work: Lindquist, Konstantinov, Magro, Atkinson, Lamar… Just how deep do Mr. Meiger’s connections go?

Strange as that may seem, it is the list of names on the page afterward that raises your hackles. While it was clear that the names on the previous page are associates of Mr. Meiger’s, or at least prominent members of the Lodge, you can only assume that this next series of names is of people your employer is…targeting. For what, you cannot say.

You stand next to Josef’s desk and record the list in your pocket journal carefully, making sure to keep the names in the exact order they appear in Mr. Meiger’s ledger. You hope that your suspicion is nothing more than the absurd imagination of an overworked secretary. Still, something about all of this has you concerned. That, and the sudden draft of frigid air that has somehow wafted into the room. Your gaze naturally drifts to the window, at which point you scream out in shock and lose your balance, stumbling backward into Mr. Meiger’s desk.

Pressed up against the office window is a host of screaming faces emerging from the mist, or perhaps composed of it. Their ghostly hands press against the glass, their eyes hollow and empty. Your reading glasses clatter to the ground and shatter under your heel as you scramble to the other side of the office. You don’t realize that you dropped your pocket journal to the ground and shattered under your heel as you scramble to the other side of the office. You don’t realize that you dropped your pocket journal in the chaos until it is too late.

Penny Intro: You sigh as the cool New England air embraces you. It has been a very stressful night: stressful enough that you’ve decided to sneak away from the clamor to grab a quick smoke before heading back to work. You rest your arms along the metal railing of the balcony, your fingers trembling as they hold your cigarette. The dreary gambrel rooftops and Victorian manors of French Hill span the view below you, the unlit windows hiding countless secrets.

You can’t remember a night in which your employer was as concerned with every little detail as he is tonight. He is normally so calm, so collected. There’s something special about tonight that has him on edge. Is it Mr. Sanford? A shudder crawls through you. For some reason, something about that man gives you the creeps. But Josef has interacted with Mr. Sanford many times before, so that cannot be the reason. What could it be that has Mr. Meiger so worried?

You are torn from your thoughts by the gathering of grey clouds overhead, swiftly blotting out the night sky. As the clouds grow ever closer, you begin to see shapes emerging from the vapor. You squint and lean over the railing for a better view. That is when you notice the true forms of the shapes in the mist: their screaming faces, their clawing hands, all writhing in torment and coming straight for you. You cry out in terror and back up against the wall as the mist envelops the building. A spectral shape emerges from the haze beyond the railing, dressed in bloodstained rags. It begs for rest in a croaking, gasping voice. Your only hope for escape is to retreat back into the manor and call for help…

Valentino Intro: “Are you going to break, or are you going to sit there admiring the cue ball all night?” you ask with a mocking smile. Your opponent sets the ivory ball back on the table with a sigh.

“I can’t help myself around ivory. You know that, Tino,” Adam replies. You rarely see Adam Gensler except during Lodge functions, but you prefer his company to that of the stuffy business types who make up most of the Lodge these days. He makes his shot, the sudden clattering interrupting the din of conversation. “Your shot, Tino. And do try to avoid hitting the nine ball first. You’re always so overeager.” Adam chuckles as he moves to the other side of the table, making way for you.

“That was one time, my friend, one time.” You roll your eyes. Truth be told, you’ve enjoyed coming to these events for the opportunity to give back to the community, not to hobnob with Arkham’s gentry. But hobnobbing has had its perks.

You lean over the table and clear your mind as you line up your shot. The room falls silent as you block out the clamor and the music, focusing all of your attention on the one ball and the corner pocket. You hold your breath and strike the cue ball. It clacks as it hits its target, and the one ball drops effortlessly into the corner pocket. “There, you see?”

It is only then that you realize the silence around you is not just in your mind. All of the light and warmth has been sucked out of the room. Adam is gone, along with everyone else who was present just moments before you took your shot. “Hello?” you call out. A dark mist coils about your ankles as you walk around the billiards table. “If this is a practical joke of some kind, it’s in awfully poor taste,” you remark. The only response is the deep growl that emerges from beneath the table.

Morbid curiosity compels you to look underneath it, at which point a dark hound pounces onto your chest, savagely clawing at your torso. Morbid curiosity compels you to look underneath it, at which point a dark hound pounces onto your chest, savagely clawing at your torso. You react instinctively, pushing it off of your body as hard as you can. It lands on the billiards table, causing it to collapse under the creature’s weight. You slowly back up as the creature rises to its feet once again and jumps off the broken table, its hollow eyes gazing into your soul.
Setup

- Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: Disappearance at the Twilight Estate, At Death’s Doorstep, Inexorable Fate, Realm of Death, Spectral Predators, Trapped Spirits, The Watcher, and Chilling Cold. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

When gathering the At Death’s Doorstep encounter set, only gather the seven Spectral locations from that encounter set. Do not gather any of the other cards from that encounter set.

- Put the seven Spectral locations into play. (See suggested location placement, below.)

- Put The Spectral Watcher enemy into play in the Entry Hall.

- Each player follows the setup instructions on the back of his or her investigator card.

- Shuffle the remaining encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

No Way Out

There is no positive resolution for this scenario. Investigators should strive to last as long as they can and gather as many clues as they can before their inevitable demise. Note that while cards can still be added to the victory display during this scenario, experience and victory points will not be gathered for this scenario.

Since these investigators do not have decks, ignore any instruction or effect that would cause them to draw cards or interact with player decks. Additionally, since these investigators do not have discard piles, each player card that would be placed in their discard pile is removed from the game, instead.

Good luck. You’ll need it.

Suggested Location Placement

!LOCATION

!LOCATION

!LOCATION

!LOCATION

!LOCATION

!LOCATION

!LOCATION

!LOCATION

The Spectral Realm

Note: This scenario only uses the seven locations with the Spectral trait. Do not set up this scenario using any locations without the Spectral trait!
No resolution was reached, because each investigator was defeated: “Mr. Sanford, thank you so much for coming. I know you are a busy man. Your presence at tonight’s meeting is very much appreciated.” Josef shakes Carl Sanford’s hand firmly as he speaks. Sanford merely nods. “I know you’ve only just arrived, but I have some… private matters to discuss with you, if that is all right,” Josef continues, his narrow eyes shifting back and forth between the men flanking Mr. Sanford.

“Very well.” The elderly man nods to his two enforcers, who step aside to give him privacy. He cradles his hands behind his back, his stature impressive for his age. His discerning eyes fall on Josef. “What is the matter?”

Josef leans closer. “It’s here, sir. It’s here in this very house.”

There is a quiet pause between the two men, and then Carl Sanford smiles.

- No experience is earned for this prologue.
- In your Campaign Log, record X pieces of evidence were left behind. X is the total number of clues on Act 1a—“The Disappearance.”
- Return each of the player cards used in this scenario to the collection.
- Each player chooses an investigator from the standard pool of investigators and assembles his or her investigator deck, as usual.
- Proceed to Scenario I: The Witching Hour.
Scenario I: The Witching Hour

Intro 1: It is a breezy November evening in Arkham—the perfect night for a walk through Independence Square, or so you had thought, up until the moment Anna Kaslow offered to tell your fortune. You agreed, though you would soon come to regret this decision. For each of the cards the Romani soothsayer draws from her deck, she weaves a tale of despair and misfortune. Judgment. Temperance. Justice. The Hermit. The Hanged Man. The Hierophant. The Lovers. The Chariot. The Wheel of Fortune. To complete her tale, Anna draws the top card and lays it in the center of the formation. Dominating the old, worn card is the ominous image of a towering construct of black onyx. A hellish storm rages over the tower, lightning coursing through the dark clouds. It reads: THE TOWER · XVI. Even if the rest of the reading had gone swimmingly, the sight of the center card would have sent a shiver down your spine. As it stands now, it feels more like the closing of a casket over your body.

“You did tell me to give it to you straight,” the soothsayer says. She sits cross-legged in front of you, wearing a stony, grim expression. From her unwavering gaze and her cold eyes, you can tell Anna derives no satisfaction from this reading. “Simple misfortune is the least of your concerns,” she explains. “This is a matter of life and death.” She motions to the cards surrounding The Tower—each of them laid in the reverse position—and stares at them intently. “Arrayed against you is everything that you cannot see. You alone stand in their way,” she says enigmatically.

The lead investigator must decide (choose one):

- “What can I do to avoid this fate?” Proceed to Intro 2.
- “This is bullshit.” Skip to Intro 3.

Intro 2: The woman nods and draws the top card of the deck with a steady hand, revealing it to you without looking at it herself. Depicted on the card is a single wooden wand, surrounded by a pattern of broken stained glass. It reads: ACE OF RODS. “You must be ready to act,” she advises. “Without hesitation. Without regret. When the opportunity arises, you must set into motion the events that will change this fate.”

In your Campaign Log, record you have accepted your fate. Add 2 🕉 tokens to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campaign.

Before drawing his or her opening hand for this scenario, the lead investigator searches the collection for 1 copy of The Tower · XVI and 1 copy of Ace of Rods and adds each of them to his or her deck, if able. The lead investigator has earned these cards. They do not count toward his or her deck size. (If one or both of these cards are not available, skip this step.)

Skip to Intro 4.

Intro 3: The woman smirks. “Yes, in a sense, I suppose it is,” she responds. With a single swift motion, she picks up each of the cards displayed before you, save for The Tower card, and shuffles them back into the deck. “The cards only reveal and advise. They cannot influence or impose.” She locks eyes with you, and her smile vanishes from her face. “In other words, though your fate is not set in stone, I assure you the danger you face is not ‘bullshit.’ It is real.” Her eyes narrow. “It is very real.”

In your Campaign Log, record you have rejected your fate. Add 2 🕉 tokens to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campaign.

Proceed to Intro 4.

Intro 4: Silence hangs in the air as you peer into The Tower card. The world around you dissolves into emptiness as your eyes fixate on the onyx tower. Rolling thunder echoes in the distance. “Do you understand now?” Anna asks. There is no other sign of the soothsayer: only her strained voice. A bolt of lightning streaks across the sky. “Do you see your fate before you, as I do?”

Another resounding crack of thunder, and you are suddenly awake. Icy rain pelts your body, soaking you through to the bone. You are lying in the mud beside a wooded trail, and there is no other soul in sight...

Setup

Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: The Witching Hour, Anette’s Coven, City of Sins, Witchcraft, Ancient Evils, Striking Fear, and The Devourer Below. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

When gathering The Devourer Below encounter set, only gather the 6 Arkham Woods locations. Do not gather any of the other cards from that encounter set.

Gather all cards from the Agents of Azathoth and Agents of Shub-Niggurath encounter sets. Set these encounter sets aside, out of play. These sets are indicated by the following icons:
DO NOT READ
until the end of the scenario

If no resolution was reached because each investigator was defeated, and it was act 1, 2, or 3 when the scenario ended: Go to Resolution 3.

If no resolution was reached because each investigator was defeated, and it was act 4 when the scenario ended: Go to Resolution 4.

Resolution 1: Despite her wounds, the leader of the coven rises to her feet. More of the hooded figures emerge from the tree line, eager to defend their leader. “Interloper!” one calls you, pulling off her hood and pointing a gnarled wooden rod in your direction. Her bright-red hair glows in the firelight, embers dancing about her extended hand. “They’re the ones from before, High Priestess: the ones who interfered with our great work.”

The “High Priestess” holds up a single hand, and a hush falls over the other witches. “As always, I admire your perseverance, sister. But I do not believe these are the ones you speak of,” she replies to the red-haired accuser. You lower your weapons as several of the hooded figures approach and surround their leader. They begin chanting in a soft tone as they examine her wounds. The red-haired witch crosses her arms and watches you with a hard glare, her gaze never straying far from you. “I am Anette,” says the leader of the coven, “and these are my sisters. Tell me: Who are you, and why are you here?”

You explain how you awoke in the woods, how you were attacked by terrible creatures, and how you came to the center of this circle in order to break the spell surrounding the woods. Anette’s eyes narrow as she hears your story. “That is impossible. The circle was closed. None could enter the woods while we were completing our spell.” She grits her teeth. “You must go at once. This is not your place.”

“But, High Priestess!—” the red-haired witch exclaims, only to be interrupted by Anette’s gaze. The two lock eyes, a battle of wills that quickly proves Anette victorious.

Lost and Separated

During this scenario, the investigators begin play separated and cut off from one another. This is represented by locations entering play “in front of” each investigator (placed just above their play area).

Act 1a—“Lost in the Woods” has the text: “Locations in front of you are connected to one another.” This text means that regardless of location/connection symbols, the locations in front of you are considered to be connected to one another, and enemies and investigators may move between them. Locations remain connected to one another via their location/connection symbols, as well.

However, Lost in the Woods also has the text: “You cannot enter locations in front of other investigators.” This means that you cannot move to a location in front of another investigator, even if the two locations are connected or if you are moving via a card effect. Note that this restriction does not apply to enemies, who are free to move between connected locations regardless of which investigator those locations are in front of.

Put 5 Witch-Haunted Woods locations into play as follows:

- In player order, each investigator puts 1 random Witch-Haunted Woods location into play in front of him or her, until there are exactly 5 Witch-Haunted Woods locations in play (see “Lost and Separated,” below). For example: In a 1-player game, there should be 5 Witch-Haunted Woods in front of that investigator. In a 2-player game, there should be 3 Witch-Haunted Woods in front of the lead investigator and 2 Witch-Haunted Woods in front of the other investigator. In a 3-player game, there should be 2 Witch-Haunted Woods in front of the lead investigator, 2 Witch-Haunted Woods in front of the next investigator, and 1 Witch-Haunted Woods in front of the final investigator. In a 4-player game, there should be 2 Witch-Haunted Woods in front of the lead investigator, and 1 Witch-Haunted Woods in front of each other investigator.

- Remove each other Witch-Haunted Woods from the game.

- Each investigator begins play at one of the locations in front of him or her, chosen at random.

Set the following cards aside, out of play: each of the Arkham Woods locations and Anette Mason.

Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.
“Stand down, Erynn,” Anette says with a firm, motherly tone, as though admonishing a child. She turns her attention back to you as the witch named Erynn lowers her head in defeat. “Go. You’ve broken the spell, just as you desired. You can leave the woods now. But I give you one final warning: cross us again, and we will not be so merciful.”

You begin to protest, but before you are able to utter a single word, a dark gale snuffs out the fire at the center of the clearing. Shadows from beyond the tree line suddenly twist and coil into the clearing, tugging at the edges of the witches’ cloaks. One by one, the shadows twist and pull each of the witches into the darkness beyond. In moments, they are gone. You are left with only the soft glow of moonlight to guide you home.

In your Campaign Log, record the witches’ spell was broken.

In your Campaign Log, under “Mementos Discovered,” record Mesmerizing Flute and Ritual Components. Each investigator earns 1 bonus experience, as he or she gains insight into Arkham’s mysterious past.

Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Resolution 2: With the spell broken, the hooded figures turn their attention to you. More of them emerge from the tree line, eager to take vengeance upon you for destroying their plans. “Interloper!” one of them calls you, pulling off her hood and pointing a gnarled wooden rod in your direction. Her bright-red hair glows in the firelight, embers dancing about her extended hand. “You will not escape this time!” she cries, prepared to strike you down.

“Stop!” the leader of the coven yells in a commanding voice, holding up her hand. The red-haired accuser stops in her tracks, and there is a sudden stillness in the clearing around the circle.

“But High Priestess,” the witch persists, “they’re the ones from before. The ones who interfered with our great work.”

The High Priestess places a hand on the red-haired witch’s shoulder. “As always, I admire your perseverance, sister. But I do not believe these are the ones you speak of,” she replies.

The red-haired witch lowers her rod as the High Priestess approaches you, her arms crossed. She watches you with a hard glare, her gaze never straying far from you. “I am Anette, and these are my sisters,” she says. “Tell me: who are you, and why are you here?”

You explain how you awoke in the woods, how you were attacked by terrible creatures, and how you came to the center of this circle in order to break the spell surrounding the woods. Anette’s eyes narrow as she hears your story. “That is impossible. The circle was closed. None could enter the woods while we were completing our spell.” She grits her teeth. “You must go at once. This is not your place.”

“But, High Priestess!—” the red-haired witch exclaims, only to be interrupted by Anette’s gaze. The two lock eyes, a battle of wills that quickly proves Anette victorious.

“Stand down, Erynn,” Anette says with a firm, motherly tone, as though admonishing a child. She turns her attention back to you as the witch named Erynn lowers her head in defeat. “Go. You’ve broken the spell, just as you desired. You can leave the woods now. But I give you one final warning: cross us again, and we will not be so merciful.”

Shadows from beyond the tree line suddenly twist and coil into the clearing, tugging at the edges of the witches’ cloaks. One by one, the shadows twist and pull each of the witches into the darkness beyond. In moments, they are gone. You are left with only the soft glow of moonlight to guide you home.

In your Campaign Log, record the witches’ spell was broken.

In your Campaign Log, under “Mementos Discovered,” record Mesmerizing Flute and Scrap of Torn Shadow. Each investigator earns 1 bonus experience, as he or she gains insight into Arkham’s mysterious past.

Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
Resolution 3: You collapse to the ground in exhaustion, your head swimming with otherworldly voices and the high-pitched piping of a hundred discordant flutes. Your entire body rattles with the sensation. Blood trickles from your ears, and tears well in your eyes. You try to crawl to safety, but it is to no avail. The piping only grows in volume, the discordant cacophony shattering your eardrums and turning your thoughts to sludge. Eventually, after what feels like hours, weariness claims your consciousness.

When you next awaken, it is by the side of Hangman’s Brook, where a small child is shaking you vigorously by the shoulders. “Get back here; don’t touch them!” the child’s mother calls to the boy, and he recoils from you. Considering the state you’re in, you wouldn’t be surprised if she thought you some kind of rummy. You brush some of the caked dirt off of your coat and rise begrudgingly to your feet, wandering toward Uptown.

In your Campaign Log, record the witches’ spell was cast.

Check the act deck.

If it was act 1 or 2 when the scenario ended, no record is made.

If it was act 3 when the scenario ended, in your Campaign Log, under “Mementos Discovered,” record Mesmerizing Flute. Each investigator earns 1 bonus experience, as he or she gains insight into Arkham’s mysterious past.

Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Resolution 4: You collapse to the ground in exhaustion, your head swimming with otherworldly voices and the high-pitched piping of a hundred discordant flutes. The sensation fades as the circle’s leader approaches, her powerful form looming over you. “We cannot allow the spell to fail. Take them to the edge of the woods and make sure we are not interrupted,” she commands several of the other hooded women. They grab you by the arms and hoist you up, dragging you away from the central clearing. You try to resist, but your limbs are numb and sluggish, and the cacophony of sound and sensations assaulting your mind has turned your thoughts to sludge. Eventually, after what feels like hours, you are hurled to the ground, and weariness claims your consciousness.

When you next awaken, it is by the side of Hangman’s Brook, where a small child is shaking you vigorously by the shoulders. “Get back here; don’t touch them!” the child’s mother calls to the boy, and he recoils from you. Considering the state you’re in, you wouldn’t be surprised if she thought you some kind of rummy. You brush some of the caked dirt off of your coat and rise begrudgingly to your feet, wandering toward Uptown.

In your Campaign Log, record the witches’ spell was cast.

In your Campaign Log, under “Mementos Discovered,” record Mesmerizing Flute. Each investigator earns 1 bonus experience, as he or she gains insight into Arkham’s mysterious past.

Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
Scenario II: At Death’s Doorstep

Four Missing, Whereabouts Unknown

Residents of French Hill are still in a tizzy after the sudden disappearance of several guests and house staff from the home of Mr. Josef Meiger during the night of the annual Silver Twilight charity gala last Sunday. “We are absolutely baffled as to how this could have happened,” said Mr. Meiger the day after the disappearances. “That said, we are confident that Sheriff Engle and the Arkham Police will do their due diligence in finding the missing persons.”

There is still no evidence whatsoever as to the whereabouts of Miss Gavriella Mizrah, Mr. Jerome Davids, Mr. Valentino Rivas, and Mrs. Penny White, all of whom vanished halfway through the event and have not been seen since. The police are offering a substantial reward for any person or persons who come forward with information related to these disappearances. When asked whether the police were considering the case a homicide, Sheriff Engle had this to say: “There’s no reason to suspect foul play is involved just yet. However, given the circumstances, we have to consider every possibility.” No other attendees have come forward with statements concerning the gala, which seemed to finish without a hitch despite the disappearances.

So far, none of the prominent members of the Silver Twilight Lodge have expressed any concern about the Lodge’s upcoming benefit dinner, which was recently moved to the same location: Josef Meiger’s estate in French Hill. “I am certain that this event will be a smashing success,” Mr. Meiger told the Arkham Advertiser in an interview yesterday. “There is no reason for the fair residents of Arkham to worry.”

—Minnie Klein

You fold up the newspaper and shove it aside on your desk, examining the other files you’ve collected over the last few days concerning the missing persons. It has been several days since your experience in the woods. You have tried to put it all out of mind, but it is impossible. Every night, you dream of a nameless place in the void of space, a faint discordant melody of hypnotizing flutes pulling you forward. Now there are others disappearing from the town without a trace. The disappearances dance along the edges of your thoughts. No reason to worry, you ponder, turning the man’s words over in your head. You think of the card reader and her warning, and you wonder if you are simply imagining devils where there are none. Regardless, there is only one way to know for sure. You pick up the invitation, examining the silver-embossed stationary and perfect calligraphy.

---

The Silver Twilight Lodge requests the pleasure of your company on the evening of November the twenty-ninth at eight o’clock at the estate of Josef Ekhard Meiger, Esq. for the benefit of The Fairchild Foundation

As you prepare for the night ahead, you cannot help but wonder: Are you taking action to remedy your fate, as the soothsayer advised? Or are you walking willingly into the jaws of a grim destiny?

Proceed to Setup.

Standalone Mode

If you are playing in Standalone Mode and do not wish to refer to any other setups or resolutions, you may use the information below when setting up this scenario:

- Assemble the chaos bag using the following tokens: +1, 0, –1, –1, –2, –2, –3, –4, ♣, ♣, ♢, ♣, ♤, ♦, ♦.
- All 4 profiles are “crossed off” in your Campaign Log.
- No pieces of evidence were left behind.

Setup

- Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: At Death’s Doorstep, Silver Twilight Lodge, Spectral Predators, Trapped Spirits, Inexorable Fate, and Chilling Cold. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

- Set the Realm of Death and The Watcher encounter sets aside, out of play. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

- Set the seven Spectral locations aside, out of play.

- Set the Josef Meiger enemy aside, out of play.

 Note: This card is double-sided and has a story card on its other side. For the best experience, do not look at the other side unless an effect instructs you to do so.
Put each of the seven non-Spectral locations into play (Entry Hall, Victorian Halls, Trophy Room, Billiards Room, Master Bedroom, Balcony, and Office). Each investigator begins play in the Entry Hall. (See suggested location placement, below.)

Check the “Missing Persons” section of the Campaign Log:

- Place 6 clues on the Entry Hall if Gavriella Mizrah’s profile is not crossed off.
- Place 6 clues on the Office if Jerome Davids’s profile is not crossed off.
- Place 6 clues on the Billiards Room if Valentino Rivas’s profile is not crossed off.
- Place 6 clues on the Balcony if Penny White’s profile is not crossed off.
- As evenly as possible, remove a total number of clues from the above locations equal to the number of pieces of evidence that were left behind in your Campaign Log.

Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

Replacing Locations

Throughout this scenario, you may be instructed to swap set-aside locations with existing ones. When a location is swapped with one that is already in play, it takes its place. All tokens, attachments, investigators, enemies, and other cards at the former location are considered to now be at the new location (attached cards remain attached, for example). No game element is considered to have moved during such a swap.

Suggested Location Placement
If Gavriella Mizrah’s profile is not crossed off and there are no clues on the Entry Hall, read the following:

The entry hall to the manor is beautifully decorated, but you find it odd that the grand staircase’s wooden balustrade has been recently repaired and, by the looks of it, hastily so. While nobody is looking, you follow the handrail up and down the stairs until you spot what you are looking for: several splinters of wood, perhaps dislodged by a bullet. You ascend the staircase once more and position yourself where one would need to be standing in order to fire such a shot. After a moment of observation, a faint glimmer near one of the decorative ferns on the second floor catches your eye. There, you find proof: a bullet casing from a .45 handgun. A gun was indeed fired in the entry hall of the manor—but if that is true, how did nobody hear the shots?

Under “Missing Persons,” next to Gavriella Mizrah’s profile, record the investigators are on Gavriella’s trail.

If Penny White’s profile is not crossed off and there are no clues on the Balcony, read the following:

The balcony outside Josef Meiger’s bedroom overlooks the rainy streets and somber spires of French Hill. According to eyewitnesses, Penny was last seen entering Josef’s bedroom, presumably to tidy it up, or perhaps to look for one of his personal belongings. The cigarette butt on the floor of the balcony tells a different story. Penny came here for a break, and judging from how busy the rest of the staff is, it was probably a much-needed one. If she had been in any danger, could she have climbed or jumped down from the balcony? You peer over the edge. It’s possible, but unlikely. A fall from here could break a leg, or worse. She likely would have retreated back into the manor, where she could have called for help...only, nobody saw her exit from the bedroom. Something doesn’t add up. You tuck the cigarette butt into your coat pocket, hoping it’s actually a lead and not a wild goose chase.

Under “Missing Persons,” next to Penny White’s profile, record the investigators are on Penny’s trail.

If Jerome Davids’s profile is not crossed off and there are no clues on the Office, read the following:

Josef Meiger’s personal office is pretty tidy for somebody whose personal secretary just went missing. Perhaps he’s just a fastidious person...or perhaps he’s been scrubbing evidence of some wrongdoing. You find nothing of note in any of Josef’s files, but after some perusing, you realize there is one place you haven’t checked: the trash. Rooting through the garbage bin yields fruit. Near the bottom is a small pocket journal belonging to Jerome Davids, probably tossed there carelessly by the cleaning staff. You turn to the last page. There, Jerome had recorded a list of names, perhaps transcribed from Josef’s records. You don’t know what it means yet, but it must be important.

Under “Missing Persons,” next to Jerome Davids’s profile, record the investigators are on Jerome’s trail.

If Valentino Rivas’s profile is not crossed off and there are no clues on the Billiards Room, read the following:

Tracing Valentino’s steps isn’t difficult. As the guest of honor (and life of the party, from what you hear) there was always a crowd around him. This makes the story that he “vanished when they weren’t looking” all the more unbelievable. In the billiards room, where Valentino was last seen, you corner Adam Gensler, the man he was playing billiards with just before his disappearance. “Look, I already told the cops and the reporters what I saw,” he explains, fidgeting and tapping his toes repeatedly. “Tino and I were playing billiards, I looked away, next thing I know he’s gone,” he insists angrily, returning to his billiards game. “Now where is that damned one ball?” he mutters. It might be nothing, but it looks like Valentino wasn’t the only thing to go missing that night.

Under “Missing Persons,” next to Valentino Rivas’s profile, record the investigators are on Valentino’s trail.

Once each relevant entry has been read, advance to act 1b.
If no resolution was reached (each investigator resigned or was defeated) and it was act 1 when the scenario ended: Go to Resolution 2.

If no resolution was reached (each investigator resigned or was defeated) and it was act 2 when the scenario ended: Go to Resolution 3.

If no resolution was reached (each investigator resigned or was defeated) and it was act 3 when the scenario ended: Go to Resolution 1.

Resolution 1: As soon as you emerge onto the patio, you are surrounded by grim men in trench coats. Several of them reach into their coat pockets: a warning not to do anything too hasty. Before any threats can be fulfilled, the silence is broken by an icy voice. “Now gentlemen, there is no need for that.” The men withdraw to reveal an elderly man you recognize as Carl Sanford, the president of the Silver Twilight Lodge. Despite the dangerous situation, his expression is almost too casual. The complete lack of fear in his posture and his actions suggests a confidence backed by substantial power. His bodyguards take several steps back, allowing you to speak with Mr. Sanford in private.

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators escaped the spectral realm.

Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Proceed to Interlude II: The Price of Progress.

Resolution 2: You head out of the manor and are embraced by the brisk evening air. Your investigation has left you exhausted and strangely paranoid. Something about that event felt peculiar to you, though you aren’t sure why. Although the guests seemed oblivious, you noticed that the staff was sweaty and jittery, and the Lodge members seemed tense as well. More than once, you noticed their gaze drawn to you, watching your every move. If you didn’t know any better, you’d think the Silver Twilight Lodge was having you tailed for some reason. Regardless, you weren’t able to find much information about the four disappearances, and you doubt you ever will. Perhaps it was nothing, after all.

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators learned nothing of the Lodge’s schemes.

Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Skip Interlude II: The Price of Progress, and proceed directly to Scenario III: The Secret Name.

Resolution 3: You flee toward the manor’s entry hall, but the wall of spectral mist still blocks your way. Emerging from the mist are several ghostly faces and arms, writhing and screaming in torment. You turn and are confronted by the empty visage of the hooded Watcher. Before you even realize your doom, the creature’s ethereal body is swirling and swooping through the air as though composed of mist itself. The creature reconstitutes before you, and its charred hand grips your throat, holding you aloft with tremendous strength. You kick and dig your nails into the creature’s hand, struggling with the ferocity of a cornered animal, but it is no use. The last thing you see is the red glare of the thing’s eyes as it drills into your mind.

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators are never seen or heard from again.

Each investigator who resigned earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Each investigator who has not resigned is killed.

If there are not enough investigators in the pool of available investigators to continue the campaign, the campaign is over, and the players lose. Each player whose investigator has been killed must choose a new investigator from the pool of available investigators.

Skip Interlude II: The Price of Progress, and proceed directly to Scenario III: The Secret Name.
Interlude II: The Price of Progress

If at least one of the investigators has the Silver Twilight trait, proceed to The Price of Progress 1.

Otherwise, skip to The Price of Progress 2.

The Price of Progress 1: “Ah, it’s you. I did not expect you to be here, though perhaps I should have,” Mr. Sanford says with a hint of surprise in his voice. “I regret that you had to be involved in this unfortunate affair. I did not plan for you to be a part of any of this.” You narrow your eyes. You suspect fortune had nothing to do with it. You ask him what will happen to those still trapped inside. “Human progress requires sacrifice,” he recites stoically. “It is lamentable when that sacrifice is in blood, but the price in lamentation does not outweigh the yield of our labor.”

Skip to The Price of Progress 3.

The Price of Progress 2: “I regret that we must meet under such... unfortunate circumstances,” Mr. Sanford says offhandedly. You narrow your eyes. You suspect fortune had nothing to do with it. You ask him what will happen to those still trapped inside. “Human progress requires sacrifice,” he recites stoically. “It is lamentable when that sacrifice is in blood, but the price in lamentation does not outweigh the yield of our labor.”

Proceed to The Price of Progress 3.

The Price of Progress 3: You didn’t come here to listen to Mr. Sanford proselytize about sacrifice. You came here for answers. You demand an explanation, but the elderly man cuts you off with a scowl. “Yes, yes. You speak of the incident last week. That was the creature’s first manifestation, and the arrival of the dark mist, which you encountered inside.” He glances at the front door to the manor and clears his throat. “The Lodge was not involved in the disappearances that occurred that night,” he explains after a short pause. “But we couldn’t exactly go to the police and tell them a creature made of mist kidnapped four people in Mr. Meiger’s household, could we? So, we had to take matters into our own hands. We suspected that creature was drawn to the crowd, so we recreated the incident in order to understand what happened—to discern its motives.” The decision to host another event at Mr. Meiger’s estate so soon after the disappearances makes sense to you now. As much as you hate to admit it, there is some logic to the plan the Lodge put into action, although you don’t particularly like being used as bait. Who knows how many innocent bystanders were put in mortal danger? Even if the goal was noble, was it worth the sacrifice?

“I hope you understand that our organization only seeks the betterment of humankind. There are harsh truths that lie beyond our five senses,” Mr. Sanford says, his expression grim. “If we are to survive and prosper, we must adapt. We must learn. We must understand. That is what our order seeks to achieve—a greater understanding of the world around us. A worthy pursuit, don’t you agree?”

☐ Check the Silver Twilight enemies in the victory display and beneath the Entry Hall.

☒ If Josef Meiger is in the victory display, proceed to The Price of Progress 4.

☒ If Josef Meiger is beneath the Entry Hall, skip to The Price of Progress 5.

☒ If neither of the above is true, and the number of Silver Twilight enemies in the victory display is equal to or greater than the number beneath the Entry Hall, proceed to The Price of Progress 4.

☒ If none of the above are true, and there are more Silver Twilight enemies beneath the Entry Hall than in the victory display, skip to The Price of Progress 6.

The Price of Progress 4: Before you can reply, one of Sanford’s men emerges from the house behind you. He sheathes a long silver blade as he addresses Mr. Sanford. “There is no sign of Josef inside, sir.” The man eyes you suspiciously, keeping his hand on the hilt of his sword. His posture reminds you of that of a knight, stoic and rigidly disciplined.

“I see,” Sanford replies. He closes his eyes and takes a deep breath before continuing. “A great loss for our order, but one we anticipated. Gather the Lodge’s belongings from inside the estate, and I will deal with the consequences.” The knight nods and heads back inside. Carl’s cold blue eyes turn back toward you. “As for you, I would ask you to leave this place at once. You have done enough harm as it is.” Before you can protest, he commands the other men nearby to escort you off the premises, and you have little choice but to comply.

☐ In your Campaign Log, record Josef disappeared into the mist.

☐ In your Campaign Log, record the investigators are enemies of the Lodge.

☐ The story continues in Scenario III: The Secret Name.
The Price of Progress 5: You consider Mr. Sanford’s words carefully. You believe that he is telling the truth, but you’re not sure if the ends justify his means. Before you can reply, Josef steps forward. “I believe our new comrades understand the value of working together,” he says politely, standing at your side. “They could have escaped on their own, but they stayed behind to make sure members of the Lodge were safe. Surely we are of the same mind.”

“Courage is not the same as sacrifice, Josef,” Carl Sanford intones patiently. “Do they have the will to do what is truly right for all of humanity?” The elderly man turns his attention back to you, his cold eyes glinting in the moonlight. He approaches calmly, extending his hand. “Regardless, you have experienced firsthand the danger that we all face. Join us, and we can face it together. With our knowledge combined, we can protect Arkham from this threat.”

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators rescued Josef.

The investigators must decide (choose one):

- “I refuse to be a part of this.” Skip to The Price of Progress 7.
- “I agree.” Skip to The Price of Progress 8.
- “I agree.” (You are lying.) Skip to The Price of Progress 9.

The Price of Progress 6: You consider Mr. Sanford’s words carefully. You believe that he is telling the truth, but you’re not sure if the ends justify his means. Before you can reply, Josef Meiger emerges from the house behind you, flanked by two guards wearing expensive suits. One wields a long silver blade as he stands guard. The other observes the situation vigilantly, keeping one hand on the grip of a revolver holstered at his side. Josef recognizes you and addresses you curtly. “You have been poking your head where you don’t belong,” he threatens, narrowing his dark eyes. “Stay your tongue, Josef,” Sanford interjects. He approaches calmly, extending his hand toward you. “You have experienced firsthand the danger that we all face. Join us, and we can face it together. With our knowledge combined, we can protect Arkham from this threat.”

In your Campaign Log, record Josef is alive and well.

The investigators must decide (choose one):

- “I refuse to be a part of this.” Skip to The Price of Progress 7.
- “I agree.” Skip to The Price of Progress 8.
- “I agree.” (You are lying.) Skip to The Price of Progress 9.

The Price of Progress 7: Mr. Sanford scowls, returning his hand to his side and narrowing his gaze. “I see. I cannot say I am not disappointed. I thought you would be insightful enough to see the value in working together. But I realize now that my confidence was misplaced.” He sighs and gazes past you, toward Josef’s manor. “Very well. The Lodge will handle this problem on our own. Return to your state of ignorance. But I warn you: do not get in our way. I am not an enemy you want to have.” Before you can protest, Sanford commands the other men nearby to escort you off the premises, and you have little choice but to comply.

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators are enemies of the Lodge.

The story continues in Scenario III: The Secret Name.

The Price of Progress 8: You shake Mr. Sanford’s hand. His grip is cold, but strong. The other members of the Lodge seem to relax around you. “We will do great works together, my friends,” says Sanford. “Great works indeed.”

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators are members of the Lodge. Add 1 ▲ token to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campaign.

The story continues in Scenario III: The Secret Name.

The Price of Progress 9: You shake Mr. Sanford’s hand. His grip is cold, but strong. The other members of the Lodge seem to relax around you. “We will do great works together, my friends,” says Sanford. “Great works indeed.” But out of the corner of your eye, you see one of the Lodge’s enforcers gripping his weapon a little tighter.

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators are members of the Lodge. Add 1 ▲ token to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campaign.

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators are deceiving the Lodge.

The story continues in Scenario III: The Secret Name.
You are startled from your reverie by the sensation of something crawling up your chest, an icy hand that clasps around your throat. It grips until your breath is trapped and your windpipe starts to crack. Only there is nothing there—just a chilly draft entering the room through the open window. The wind shrill, whistling wind rattles your window frame, penetrating the safety of your home. It almost sounds like the dissonant notes of a dreadful flute: a mindless, haunting music that fills you with inexplicable terror. You rush to the window and slam it shut, hands trembling. Still, the thin, discordant notes echo around you. This can’t be real, you think. Not here, not now. But denial provides no asylum.

The cold creeps its way up your back once again. A thin, grey mist pours into the room, seeping beneath your front door and through the cracks around your window. It crawls along the ground and coils slowly around your ankles, sending shivers up your body. You run into your bedroom, slam the door, and lock it. A few seconds of respite are all you receive before the invader resumes its assault. Over and over, a heavy force slams against the door, shaking the entire room. You press against the door, trying to hold it shut. With each pounding crash, dark mist seeps through cracks appearing in the wood. With a final crash, the door shatters. You are hurled back, landing not on the floor but in a cloud of mist, gripped by a hundred spectral arms that cling into your flesh and tear you limb from limb.

NO!—That can’t be right. You are here, reading this very text. A wave of relief washes over you as you realize it is all in your head. Even so, the words compel your mind to torment you with visions of a macabre death. You find yourself glancing at your window, searching for dark mist that is not there. What if the text is trying to tell you something? Maybe—no, that’s impossible.

“Real or imagined, your fate approaches all the same.”
You nod. Everyone in Arkham has at least some passing knowledge of the witch whose ghost supposedly haunts the old condemned "Witch House" in French Hill. Most believe her to be a work of fiction; a tall tale meant to scare young children away from the decrepit house. Mr. Sanford’s steely gaze and humorless tone makes it clear to you that this is not the case. "Perhaps this Anette is a true descendant of Keziah, or perhaps she is simply using her name. In any event, I believe these events are connected. To that end, I have a task for you, on behalf of the Silver Twilight Lodge." Carl Sanford rises to his feet, using his cane more for show than for balance. You rise as well, ready to perform whatever duties are necessary to get to the bottom of this mystery.

"We need as much information about this coven as we can obtain. If there is any place that will have these answers, it is the house where Keziah herself lived all those years ago." You nod in agreement—there are too many questions you need answered. What spell were the witches casting that night in the woods? What is their motive? And what is their connection to the creature that kidnapped those four unfortunate souls? You shake Mr. Sanford’s hand and depart for the Witch House.

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators told the Lodge about the coven. Add 1 token to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campaign. Skip to Setup.

Intro 3: You shake your head. You’re not sure if the events that took place in the woods are connected, or if they even really happened—some part of you still believes it was all a strange dream. Mr. Sanford examines you with a cold, piercing glare. You get the feeling that he is looking directly through you. “Very well,” he says. “Out of curiosity, does the name ‘Keziah Mason’ mean anything to you?”

You nod. Everyone in Arkham has at least some passing knowledge of the witch whose ghost supposedly haunts the old condemned “Witch House” in French Hill. Most believe her to be a work of fiction; a tall tale meant to scare young children away from the decrepit house. Mr. Sanford’s steely gaze and humorless tone makes it clear to you that this is not the case. "Perhaps this Anette is a true descendant of Keziah, or perhaps she is simply using her name. In any event, I believe these events are connected. To that end, I have a task for you, on behalf of the Silver Twilight Lodge." Carl Sanford rises to his feet, using his cane more for show than for balance. You rise as well, ready to perform whatever duties are necessary to get to the bottom of this mystery.

“We need as much information about this coven as we can obtain. If there is any place that will have these answers, it is the house where Keziah herself lived all those years ago.” You nod in agreement—there are too many questions you need answered. What spell were the witches casting that night in the woods? What is their motive? And what is their connection to the creature that kidnapped those four unfortunate souls? You shake Mr. Sanford’s hand and depart for the Witch House.

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators told the Lodge about the coven. Add 1 token to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campaign. Skip to Setup.

Intro 1: The upstairs study of the Silver Twilight Lodge is cozy, if a little cramped. The floor is covered in a plush carpet, and several comfortable sofas and small round tables fill the warmly lit room. Portraits of world-weary Lodge members line the walls around you. Carl Sanford, president of the Lodge, sits across from you, idly swirling a glass of Merlot in his wrinkled hand.

“The Silver Twilight Lodge pursues knowledge that can help us elevate our understanding of the universe,” Mr. Sanford explains, pausing to take a sip from his wine. “The creature you encountered in Josef Meiger’s estate—its appearance is not the only peculiar happening in Arkham as of late. Tell me: have you experienced anything else recently that might be connected to these events?”

The investigators must decide (choose one):

Tell the Lodge of the witches in the woods. Proceed to Intro 2.

Tell him you know of no possible connection. (You are lying.) Skip to Intro 3.

Intro 2: You tell Mr. Sanford about your experience last week—waking up in the middle of the woods, the strange mist that weaved throughout the trees, the witches and their spell. He leans forward and listens intently as you explain the night’s strange events, your memories still somewhat of a haze. You conclude your story, and the elderly man considers your words. “Interesting,” he says at last. "I know of this coven. They are led by a witch named Anette Mason. Their magic is no trivial thing. They have passed down arcane secrets that can manipulate the energies of the universe. It is dangerous knowledge they possess—knowledge I believe they derived from a powerful witch who fled from Salem over two hundred years ago. Does the name ‘Keziah’ mean anything to you?"
If at least one of the investigators is a Mystic (▲), read the sidebar below. Otherwise, it all looks like gibberish to you; skip this sidebar.

▲: The markings on the tome form the basis for some kind of spell or ritual. It involves calling out to the dead – beseeching them for power, for secrets, or perhaps for aid. But who was beseeching whom, and for what purpose?

“To this end, I have a task for you, on behalf of the Silver Twilight Lodge.” Carl Sanford rises to his feet, using his cane more for show than for balance. You rise as well, ready to perform whatever duties are necessary to get to the bottom of this mystery.

“We need as much information about this creature as we can obtain. If there is any place that will have these answers, it is the house where Keziah herself lived all those years ago.” You nod in agreement—there are too many questions you need answered. Perhaps this is connected to the spell the witches were casting that night in the woods, after all. If so, what is their motive? And what does this have to do with the creature that kidnapped those four unfortunate souls? You nod to Mr. Sanford and depart for the Witch House.

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators hid their knowledge of the coven. Skip to Setup.

Intro 4: After your confrontation with the president of the Silver Twilight Lodge, you travel to the manor of the Arkham Historical Society in Southside. You are positive that the events you experienced in the woods last week have something to do with the creature that kidnapped those four unfortunate souls. It’s just a hunch—a feeling that crawls along the back of your neck, imploring you to look away—but you’re sure that everything is connected. You’re just not sure how.

As you enter, one of the Historical Society’s many researchers greets you and asks if she can help in any way. You give a cursory description of the information you’re looking for; just enough that she can direct you where to look, but vague enough to leave your motives at the door. “I don’t know why you are researching such morbid affairs, but the records you are looking for should be in the library on the third floor,” the researcher says.

You thank her and head to the third floor, where you begin to study the history of witchcraft in Arkham. In the late 17th century, Arkham was one of the New England towns caught up in the hysteria of witch trials. Accusations of witchcraft spread like wildfire, and many of the accused were executed by hanging or burning, guilty and innocent alike. But there was one witch whose infamy rose above the rest, and whose mystical power was never in question: Keziah Mason.

You recognize the name as the ghost who supposedly haunts the old Witch House in French Hill. You had always thought her to be a work of fiction; a tall tale meant to scare young children away from the condemned house. But the Historical Society’s records indicate that Keziah was a real person: a powerful witch who had fled from Salem over two hundred years ago.

You are no stranger to real witchcraft. If Keziah Mason has anything to do with the coven you encountered in the woods, you must discover that connection. You leave the manor and head toward French Hill, where the Witch House awaits…

Skip to Setup.

Intro 5: Your lead regarding the Silver Twilight Lodge’s charity gala turned out to be a bust, but Anna Kaslow’s reading still plays out over and over in your mind. You cannot help but feel as though you are missing a piece of this puzzle—something you can use to avoid the dire fate the tarot reader described. Turning your attention back to the coven of witches you encountered in the woods last week, you travel to the manor of the Arkham Historical Society in Southside. Perhaps there is some piece of information you have overlooked that will shed light on their identity, or their motives.

As you enter, one of the Historical Society’s many researchers greets you and asks if she can help in any way. You give a cursory description of the information you’re looking for; just enough that she can direct you where to look, but vague enough to leave your motives at the door. “I don’t know why you are researching such morbid affairs, but the records you are looking for should be in the library on the third floor,” the researcher says.

You thank her and head to the third floor, where you begin to study the history of witchcraft in Arkham. In the late 17th century, Arkham was one of the New England towns caught up in the hysteria of witch trials. Accusations of witchcraft spread like wildfire, and many of the accused were executed by hanging or burning, guilty and innocent alike. But there was one witch whose infamy rose above the rest, and whose mystical power was never in question: Keziah Mason.

You recognize the name as the ghost who supposedly haunts the old Witch House in French Hill. You had always thought her to be a work of fiction; a tall tale meant to scare young children away from the condemned house. But the Historical Society’s records indicate that Keziah was a real person: a powerful witch who had fled from Salem over two hundred years ago.

You are no stranger to real witchcraft. If Keziah Mason has anything to do with the coven you encountered in the woods, you must discover that connection. You leave the manor and head toward French Hill, where the Witch House awaits...

Skip to Setup.

Intro 6: You pin the newspaper article up on your wall along with the rest of the evidence you’ve found. Whatever is happening in Josef Meiger’s manor, it’s getting out of hand. First, there were the four disappearances on the twenty-second, at the Silver Twilight Lodge’s annual charity gala. Now more have gone missing after a second event at the same estate. Is the Lodge somehow involved? Why else would they move this dinner to Mr. Meiger’s estate?

That’s not the only headline, either. Strange sightings have been occurring throughout the city: ghostly figures, an ashen mist, and a hunched, cloaked figure whose identity is hotly debated by the community. The name on the tips of everybody’s tongues is Keziah Mason—the ghost who supposedly haunts the old Witch House in French Hill. You had always thought her to be a work of fiction; a tall tale meant to scare young children away from the condemned house. But with all of the disappearances and odd sightings occurring throughout town, you’re not so sure. Perhaps there is something to this old ghost story, after all.

Proceed to Setup.

Standalone Mode

If you are playing in Standalone Mode and do not wish to refer to any other setups or resolutions, you may use the information below when setting up this scenario:

- Assemble the chaos bag using the following tokens: +1, 0, −1, −1, −2, −2, −3, −4, , , , , , .
- The investigators are enemies of the Lodge.

Setup

- Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: The Secret Name, City of Sins, Inexorable Fate, Realm of Death, Witchcraft, and Rats. These sets are indicated by the following icons:
  - Put Moldy Halls, Walter Gilman’s Room, and the three Decrepit Door locations into play. Each investigator begins play in the Moldy Halls. (See suggested location placement below.)
  - Set the seven “Unknown Places” locations aside as a separate “Unknown Places Deck.” To do this, perform the following:
    - Shuffle the Unknown Places with Witch House Ruins on its revealed side and three other random Unknown Places locations together to form the bottom four cards of the Unknown Places Deck, unrevealed side faceup.
    - Then, place the other three Unknown Places locations on top, in a random order. All seven cards of the Unknown Places deck should be showing only the unrevealed side, so the players do not know which of the Unknown Places is the Witch House Ruins.
  - Set the following cards aside, out of play: Nahab, Site of the Sacrifice, Keziah’s Room, The Black Book, both copies of Strange Geometry, and both copies of Ghostly Presence.
  - Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.
There are no markings or clues which would inform as to who this room once belonged to—only the stench of mold and the sound of rats scampering on the other side.

Decrepit Door

Witch House.

LOCATION

Suggested Location Placement

Illus. Matthew Cowdery

The door to Walter Gilman’s room is locked. An additional cost to enter: Walley Gilman’s key. (See Investigator Skills). The only marking is a 3-inch scar in the wood, caused by a bullet. Decrepit Door.

Moldy Halls

LOCATION

Suggested Location Placement

Illus. Matthew Cowdery

Room, investigators in the Moldy Halls must spend

As an additional cost to enter Walter Gilman's room, investigators must spend 1 secret. There is a 3-inch scar in the wood, caused by a bullet. Decrepit Door.

Witch House.

LOCATION

Suggested Location Placement

Illus. Matthew Cowdery

The door to Walter Gilman’s room is locked. An additional cost to enter: Walley Gilman’s key. (See Investigator Skills). The only marking is a 3-inch scar in the wood, caused by a bullet. Decrepit Door.

Moldy Halls

LOCATION

Suggested Location Placement

Illus. Matthew Cowdery

Room, investigators in the Moldy Halls must spend

As an additional cost to enter Walter Gilman's room, investigators must spend 1 secret. There is a 3-inch scar in the wood, caused by a bullet. Decrepit Door.
If no resolution was reached (each investigator resigned or was defeated): Flashes of vision spark your memory as you are dragged along the dirty wooden floor. A foul ceremony—the house—Nahab—a rhythmic chant—the spiraling black vortex—a dark revelry—the Primal Chaos—a child’s cries—a writhing tunnel inside your chest.

Proceed to Resolution 1.

Resolution 1: You awaken in the muddy lawn at the base of some crooked wooden steps, the front door of the Witch House looming above you. Every fiber of your being is filled with regret. You know you have failed to prevent something awful, though you are not sure exactly what. The evidence of your eyes and ears suggests what you saw inside the Witch House was not concurrent with here and now. Regardless, you’ve learned several things about Keziah Mason, the witch who once inhabited this old and forsaken house. With your spirit diminished and your body aching, this information will have to suffice. You dare not venture back into this infernal house.

Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

arez If Brown Jenkin was defeated at least once during this scenario, each investigator earns 1 bonus experience.

arez If Nahab was defeated at least once during this scenario, each investigator earns 1 bonus experience.

Check the act deck.

arez If it was act 1 when the scenario ended, no additional record is made.

arez If it was act 2 when the scenario ended, in your Campaign Log, under “Mementos Discovered,” record Gilman’s Journal and Keziah’s Formulae. Additionally, any one investigator may choose to add The Black Book story asset to his or her deck. This card does not count toward that investigator’s deck size. If an investigator chooses to include The Black Book in his or her deck, add 1 ♦ token to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campaign.

Resolution 2: When you come to, you are lying on the wooden floor of Walter Gilman’s room. The trappings of Keziah’s foul practices are nowhere to be found, nor is the fanged, bearded rat—Keziah’s “familiar,” as you now understand. Just as you are about to rise to your feet, you spot something glinting in a corner of the room. Crawling underneath Gilman’s bed, you reach out and grab the trinket. It is a worn nickel crucifix, similar to the ones you saw in the loomfixer’s room. You shove it into your pocket before leaving the troubling room and its strange angles behind. You’ve learned as much as you care to uncover about Keziah Mason, the witch who once inhabited this old and forsaken house. As you step out into the chilly November air, you turn and take one last look at the decrepit Witch House. You fear that though you may never enter this place again, in your thoughts and your dreams, you will never truly leave it behind.

Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display. Each investigator earns 2 bonus experience as he or she gains insight into Arkham’s mysterious past.

In your Campaign Log, under “Mementos Discovered,” record Gilman’s Journal, Keziah’s Formulae, and Worn Crucifix.

Any one investigator may choose to add The Black Book story asset to his or her deck. This card does not count toward that investigator’s deck size. If an investigator chooses to include The Black Book in his or her deck, add 1 ♦ token to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campaign.
Scenario IV: The Wages of Sin

Ever since your encounter with the ghost in the Witch House, you have been forced to reconsider everything you know about life and death. Keziah Mason died over two hundred years ago, but her spirit remains in the spectral mist—the same mist you encountered in Josef Meiger’s manor. One question lingers in your mind as you consider the events that have transpired: Does Keziah’s spirit linger because of the mist, or is the mist caused by her presence? Which is the disease, and which the symptom?

The more you delve into Arkham’s history of witchcraft and persecution, the more restless you become. Night after night, you are assaulted by terrible dreams—dreams of death and decay, of guilt and sin. There is an evil that dwells in this city, an evil that has long remained hidden in the darkness of Arkham’s past. What’s worse, your inquiry has reached an impasse. You believe that if you can find the coven of witches you saw in the woods that fateful night, you might be able to learn more about Keziah Mason or of this unspoken evil.

As you go through your morning routine, your eyes drift across one of the smaller headlines of today’s newspaper: “Ghost Sightings on Hangman’s Hill? Residents of Uptown claim to have seen human shapes in the thick fog emanating from Hangman’s Brook…” It couldn’t be a coincidence, could it?

Then the realization dawns on you—if it is witches you seek, the only place you can be certain to find them is six feet underground, in the place where professed witches were executed all those years ago. Searching for specters in a graveyard may not be your safest bet, but you’re not sure one can stay safe in this city anymore.

Setup

Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: The Wages of Sin, Anette’s Coven, City of Sins, Inexorable Fate, Realm of Death, Trapped Spirits, and Witchcraft. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

Set The Watcher encounter set aside, out of play. This encounter set is indicated by the following icon:

Randomly choose one of the two The Gallows locations, one of the two Heretics’ Graves locations, one of the two Chapel Attic locations, and one of the two Chapel Crypt locations, and put them into play. Remove the other versions of The Gallows, Heretics’ Graves, Chapel Attic, and Chapel Crypt from the game. Then, put Haunted Fields, Abandoned Chapel, and Hangman’s Brook into play (see suggested location placement, below).

These locations have revealed versions on both sides. One side has the Spectral trait, and one side does not. When putting these locations into play, use the revealed sides without the Spectral trait.

Each investigator begins play in Hangman’s Brook.

Set the four Spectral Web assets aside, out of play.

Shuffle the six Heretic enemies and set aside four of them, at random. Remove the other two copies from the game. These cards are double-sided and have story cards on their reverse side. For the best experience, do not look at the story cards on their other side.

This scenario utilizes two separate encounter decks.

Separate each of the remaining cards with the Spectral trait and shuffle them together to build the spectral encounter deck (see “The Spectral Encounter Deck,” below).

Shuffle each of the remaining non-Spectral cards together to build the standard encounter deck.
Standalone Mode

If you are playing in Standalone Mode and do not wish to refer to any other setups or resolutions, you may use the information below when setting up this scenario:

- Assemble the chaos bag using the following tokens: +1, 0, 0, –1, –2, –3, –4, 🍀, 🍁, 🍂, 🍃, 🍄, 🍅.

- Three mementos are listed under “Mementos Discovered.”

---

The Spectral Encounter Deck

During the setup of this scenario, two encounter decks are constructed: a “standard” encounter deck and a “spectral” encounter deck. Generally speaking, whenever an investigator would interact with the encounter deck, that investigator should use the standard encounter deck.

However, at a certain point during this scenario, locations may flip over to their Spectral side. While an investigator is at a location with the Spectral trait, that investigator should use the spectral encounter deck instead of the standard encounter deck for all purposes, unless otherwise noted. This includes drawing cards from the encounter deck, as well as searching, looking at, revealing, or otherwise interacting with the encounter deck (or encounter discard pile) in any way. This also includes abilities that trigger when the encounter deck runs out of cards. If an effect specifically refers to the standard encounter deck or spectral encounter deck, it interacts with the specified deck regardless of the investigator’s location.

Each of the two encounter decks have their own discard pile. Whenever a card with the Spectral trait would be discarded, it is placed in the discard pile for the spectral encounter deck. All other encounter cards are discarded to the discard pile for the standard encounter deck.

Note: Flipping a location over from one side to another during this scenario does not “reveal” the new location.
LOCATION
This old, broken-down chapel has been abandoned for several decades now. Perhaps once it was a place of sanctity. These days it is only a source of sober melancholy.

During the mythos phase, each investigator in Abandoned Chapel gets –1 to each skill.

LOCATION
Forced
– After you draw a non-weakness card from your deck while at Chapel Attic: Place that card facedown beneath Chapel Attic, out of play.

After you successfully investigate Chapel Attic:
Add each card beneath it to its owner’s hand.

LOCATION
A narrow stone staircase guides you deep below the chapel, where those of good repute were given “proper” burials. In a far corner of the room, a strange, dusty contraption is connected to one of the coffins, as dead as everything else in this room.

While there are no ready enemies at Chapel Crypt, it gets –3 shroud.

LOCATION
Originating from a natural spring near the peak of Hangman’s Hill, the narrow, shallow brook fills the surrounding woods with a quiet, peaceful babbling. The brook winds down the hill southward, forming the western border of Arkham’s Uptown district.

: Resign.
“Whose bright idea was this, anyway?”

LOCATION
Few creatures call the wooded fields surrounding Hangman’s Hill home. Patches of dark, pointed witchweed blossoms have choked out all other flora, and wisps of thin grey fog seem to drift through the air, like long fingers reaching out for something to grasp.

Each Spectral enemy at Haunted Fields gets a bonus value.

Each Spectral enemy at Haunted Fields gets a bonus value.

Eyesight: Draw a non-weakness card from your deck while at Chapel Attic: Place that card facedown beneath Chapel Attic, out of play.

After you successfully investigate Chapel Attic:
Add each card beneath it to its owner’s hand.

 LOCATION
The gallows were decommissioned in 1901 after the execution of serial murderer Piper Thomassan. Even so, the wooden platform still stands atop Hangman’s Hill, a memorial to the brutality of humankind.

The Gallows gets +1 shroud for each Witch enemy in play.

The Gallows gets +1 shroud for each Witch enemy in play.

While investigating Heretics’ Graves, add your value to your skill value for the investigation.

Each Spectral enemy at Haunted Fields gets a bonus value.

Each Spectral enemy at Haunted Fields gets a bonus value.

Suggested Location Placement for “The Wages of Sin”
If no resolution was reached because each investigator resigned: Proceed to Resolution 1.

If no resolution was reached because each investigator was defeated: Proceed to Resolution 2.

Resolution 1: Rays of faded sunlight stream through the haze, and the unnatural mist finally recedes. As it does, Hangman’s Hill returns to its original state. No other spiteful ghosts emerge to haunt you, and the witches who summoned them have retreated into the shadows once more. You hope that you have done enough to prevent the rest of Arkham to succumbing to this horror.

Æ In your Campaign Log, record X heretics were unleashed unto Arkham. X is the number of Heretic enemies in play. (If it is act 1, instead record 4 heretics were unleashed unto Arkham.)
Æ If X is 3 or less, under “Mementos Discovered,” record Wisp of Spectral Mist.
Æ Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Resolution 2: Resigned to your fate, you fall to your knees. The mist parts. Time slows to a crawl as the watcher emerges. Its spectral form glides along the ground, approaching with the slow surety of a ticking clock. You close your eyes, unwilling to look upon your killer. Your fingers dig into your palm, and you brace yourself.

The moment passes.

When you open your eyes again, the creature is gone, along with the spectral mist.

…Have you been spared?

Æ In your Campaign Log, record the investigators survived the watcher’s embrace.
Æ In your Campaign Log, record X heretics were unleashed unto Arkham. X is the number of Heretic enemies in play. (If it is act 1, instead record 4 heretics were unleashed unto Arkham.)
Æ If X is 3 or less, under “Mementos Discovered,” record Wisp of Spectral Mist.
Æ Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
Scenario V: For the Greater Good

Intro 1: Ever since your brush with death at Hangman’s Hill, the situation in Arkham has only worsened. In the days since, there have been more reports of “ghost sightings” and even several more disappearances. A thin layer of grey mist lingers over the streets at all hours, day and night. As soon as the sun begins to set each evening, doors are shut and locked. Without truly realizing why, very few people dare venture out at night. Some businesses have even closed their doors to customers during the day, citing “poor weather.” Things are getting out of hand.

Check Campaign Log.

☐ If the investigators are members of the Lodge, proceed to Intro 2.
☐ If the investigators are enemies of the Lodge, skip to Intro 3.
☐ If the investigators learned nothing of the Lodge’s schemes, skip to Intro 4.
☐ If the investigators are never seen or heard from again, skip to Intro 5.

Intro 2: The creature that appeared at the Lodge’s charity gala is clearly not bound to Josef Meiger’s manor, which means the horrors you’ve experienced could be just the start of something much worse. It is time to report your findings to the Silver Twilight Lodge. Perhaps they can help interpret the knowledge you’ve gathered, and inform you as to what your next step should be. With their help, you may be able to save Arkham...

Check Campaign Log. If the investigators are deceiving the Lodge, read the sidebar below. Otherwise, skip this sidebar.

...though you suspect the Lodge has other interests. The Lodge clearly knows more about what is happening than they care to admit. There is a sinister purpose that lurks beneath the surface of the Lodge, and you intend to discover what that purpose is.

Skip to Setup.

Intro 3: The creature that appeared at the Lodge’s charity gala is clearly not bound to Josef Meiger’s manor, which means the horrors you’ve experienced could be just the start of something much worse. You’re not sure why just yet, but you know the Silver Twilight Lodge is connected to the creature in some way. Perhaps it’s time to pay the Lodge a visit— with or without their permission.

Skip to Setup.

Intro 4: You can’t help but wonder if you missed something important in the home of Josef Meiger. The four disappearances that occurred at the Lodge’s charity gala could not have been a coincidence. If those victims encountered a creature like the one you saw at the graveyard, the horrors you’ve experienced could be just the start of something much worse. You’re not sure why just yet, but you are sure that the Silver Twilight Lodge is connected to these events in some way. Perhaps it’s time to pay the Lodge a visit— with or without their permission.

Skip to Setup.

Intro 5: Too many disappearances have occurred at Josef Meiger’s estate for it to be a coincidence: first, the four victims at the charity gala, then the ones who attended the benefit dinner one week later. If they encountered a creature like the one you saw at the graveyard, the horrors you’ve experienced could be just the start of something much worse. You’re not sure why just yet, but you are sure that the Silver Twilight Lodge is connected to these events in some way. Perhaps it’s time to pay the Lodge a visit— with or without their permission.

Proceed to Setup.

Standalone Mode

If you are playing in Standalone Mode and do not wish to refer to any other setup/resolutions, you may use the information below when setting up and playing this scenario:

☐ Assemble the chaos bag using the following tokens:
   +1, 0, −1, −2, −3, −4, 0, 0, 0, 0, 0, 0, 0, 0, 0.

☐ The investigators must decide (choose one):
   ✷ The investigators are members of the Lodge.
   ✷ The investigators are not members of the Lodge.

Skip to Setup.
Set the following cards aside, out of play: the Puzzle Box asset, the Summoned Beast enemy, the August Lindquist asset, and the double-sided Nathan Wick enemy.

Set 1 ♦ token, 1 ♣ token, 1 ♦ token, and 1 ♠ token aside, out of play. These tokens should be taken from your collection, not from your chaos bag. These tokens are keys. (See “Keys” on next page.)

Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

Keys

The setup of this scenario instructs the players to set aside 1 ♦ token, 1 ♣ token, 1 ♦ token, and 1 ♠ token, as keys. These keys are never placed in the chaos bag and do not act as traditional chaos tokens. Instead, they represent keys which investigators can recover and use throughout the scenario.

Keys can enter play via several different card effects, and are usually placed on an enemy, location, or story asset. Keys can be acquired in one of three ways:

- If a location with a key on it has no clues, an investigator can take control of its key as a ♦ ability.
- If an enemy with a key on it leaves play, the investigator who caused that enemy to leave play must take control of its key. (If the enemy leaves play through some other means, place its key on its location.)
- Some card effects may allow investigators to take control of keys in other ways.

When an investigator takes control of a key, he or she places that key on his or her investigator card. If an investigator who controls 1 or more keys is eliminated, place each of those keys on his or her location. As an ➔ ability, an investigator may give any number of his or her keys to another investigator at the same location.
If no resolution was reached (each investigator resigned or was defeated): You manage to escape the building and flee on foot. As you run, you can hear a thunderous rumble coming from the manor. Several others burst through the front door behind you, too preoccupied to notice you. One yells to her companions: “Get out and gather at the Unvisited Isle! We have to perform the binding rite with or without the device!”

“What about the guardian?” A man at the gates asks.

“It’s no use,” she replies. “Just go!”

That is when the screaming begins. A spray of blood splatters against the basement window. Those who escaped immediately panic and flee.

You don’t stop or look back. You run until the building has faded behind the dense, grey mist, until you can no longer hear the screams of those still inside, until your legs can barely move.

Is this the kind of “sacrifice” the Silver Twilight Lodge believes in making? And if so, what does this mean for the “binding rite” they seek to complete at the Unvisited Isle?

In your Campaign Log, record the guardian of the trap emerged.

Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Skip Interlude III: The Inner Circle, and proceed directly to Scenario VI: Union and Disillusion.
Resolution 1: Every fiber of your being is stretched as the box pulls you in. However, before it can accomplish its task, the lid is suddenly slammed shut by an elderly hand. You reel backward and collapse as the pulling force ceases. When your senses finally return to you, Carl Sanford is standing over you, unflappable as ever. “I see you managed to open the device without defeating its guardian. How fortunate,” he declares. He examines the box closely, removing the key and the coin from the container and recognizing them instantly. “I had a feeling you would be a valuable asset to the Lodge, but it seems I underestimated your resourcefulness. Perhaps it is time that you learn the truth behind our organization. I have a feeling you are destined for great things.” Unexpectedly, Mr. Sanford hands the puzzle box back to you, along with the components that unlocked it. “Come with me. There is much to discuss.”

- In your Campaign Log, record the investigators discovered how to open the puzzle box. Any one investigator may choose to add the Puzzle Box story asset to his or her deck. This card does not count toward that investigator’s deck size.
- Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
- Proceed to Interlude III: The Inner Circle.

Resolution 2: Every fiber of your being is stretched as the box pulls you in. However, before it can accomplish its task, you manage to reach out and slam the lid shut. You shudder uncontrollably as your senses slowly return to you. This box is more dangerous than you could have imagined. In the hands of the Lodge, it could have been a powerful weapon, though you’re not sure what they intended to do with it. Just then, you hear several Lodge members approaching. You quickly shift one of the room’s bookcases aside and hide behind it before they enter the room. “You’re sure you heard something in here? I don’t see anybody,” one of them says.

“Hm…” the other pauses, presumably inspecting the room for signs of intruders. “Must have been nothing.”

“It’s all right. We’re all a bit on edge since the trap box went missing. Come, we don’t want to be late for the ceremony. Tonight is an important night.” Their footfalls become softer as they depart. The man’s words linger in your thoughts momentarily. What did he mean by tonight being an important night? This could be just as important as the puzzle box they had been attempting to open. You quietly follow the two men as they head deep into the tunnels beneath the Lodge. You struggle to keep up with them while trying to keep your footsteps silent on the stone floor of the passageway. Finally, they enter a large door with the familiar three arrows of Silver Twilight emblazoned along its surface. Ritualistic chanting fills the hall from the other side. You approach softly, placing your ear against the door to listen in.
“Brothers and sisters,” an elderly voice announces, “thank you for coming to this hallowed gathering. The time we have long waited for approaches.” You recognize the man’s voice – it is Carl Sanford, president of the Silver Twilight Lodge. “For many decades, the Order of the Silver Twilight has pursued knowledge that can elevate humanity. We have defended against threats to our very existence. We have sacrificed everything for this sacred cause. Now, one of these threats terrorizes our city, and once again we must do what has to be done in order to protect it.” The crowd responds with solemn approval. “Tonight, we will complete the ritual we began many nights ago at the center of the Unvisited Isle. Tonight, we will finally bind the revenant and learn what it knows. We must not allow the secrets of AZATHOTH to be lost to those who would do humanity harm.”

The cult replies with a monotone hymn, and you take this opportunity to flee the Lodge before you are discovered. The conspiracy you have unveiled leaves you with even more questions. If the revenant Mr. Sanford speaks of is what you think it is, binding it will surely protect Arkham, as he claims. But what knowledge do they seek to learn from it?... and what in the hell is an “AZATHOTH?”

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators discovered how to open the puzzle box. Any one investigator may choose to add the Puzzle Box story asset to his or her deck. This card does not count toward that investigator’s deck size.

Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Skip Interlude III: The Inner Circle, and proceed directly to Scenario VI: Union and Disillusion.

Resolution 3: The beast that had emerged from the box was a vicious guardian, slaughtering anyone in its path. Somehow you were able to slay the creature, but the consequences were dire. Many Lodge members were gruesomely killed by the creature’s rampage before you were able to put it down. Worse, the device it emerged from was destroyed beyond recognition. You’re not sure whether it broke as a result of the beast’s emergence or as a result of its death, but either way, it is a regretful outcome. “This didn’t work as planned,” one of the robed members of the Order states matter-of-factly as you examine the crushed puzzle box.

“That’s a hell of an understatement,” another adds. She places a hand on your shoulder and gently pulls you away from the remains of the device. “Come on, that’s a lost cause,” she says. Her partner ignores your presence and stoically addresses her. “We’ll have to get to the Unvisited Isle and complete the binding rite without the trap.” She nods and takes one last look at you before the remaining Lodge members flee the building.

Is this the kind of “sacrifice” the Silver Twilight Lodge believes in making? And if so, what does this mean for the “binding rite” they seek to complete at the Unvisited Isle?

In your Campaign Log, record the guardian of the trap emerged and was defeated.

Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Skip Interlude III: The Inner Circle, and proceed directly to Scenario VI: Union and Disillusion.
The Inner Circle 1: You have been brought deep into the inner sanctum, where only the highest-ranking members of the Lodge are allowed. Mr. Sanford explains that the Order of the Silver Twilight is far older and more important than the public-facing Silver Twilight Lodge, and that their knowledge extends into the realm of the arcane and the obscure. “For many decades, the Order of the Silver Twilight has pursued knowledge that can elevate humanity. We have defended against threats to our very existence. We have sacrificed everything for this sacred cause. Now, one of these threats terrorizes our city, and we are the only ones who can stop it. You know the creature I speak of.” You nod in affirmation.

“Here is what we know: it was the witches who brought this abomination upon Arkham. We tried to stop their ritual, but unfortunately, we were unsuccessful in binding it. Now it is loose, and we must finish what we started before the witches are able to do the same. But first, I understand you may have some information for us, as well. Please, hand over what you have found. It is important that we collaborate in order to understand this situation.”

The investigators must decide (choose one):

- Give Mr. Sanford everything you have found. Proceed to Inner Circle 2.
- Tell him you have nothing to show. (You are lying.) Skip to Inner Circle 3.

Inner Circle 2: You show Mr. Sanford the evidence you’ve collected. “Hm... Yes, I see. It is as I suspected,” he murmurs as he inspects the trinkets.

- Cross off each memento listed under “Mementos Discovered” in your Campaign Log.
- Check Campaign Log. If the investigators rescued Josef and the investigators told the Lodge about the coven, proceed to Inner Circle 4. Otherwise, skip to Inner Circle 5.

Inner Circle 3: You don’t trust Carl Sanford with these pieces of evidence. Who knows what he intends to do with them? In the hands of the president of the Silver Twilight Lodge, any one of these items could be a deadly instrument. You lie, informing him that your investigation has so far proven fruitless. He clenches his jaw and glares at you for a moment, his cold blue eyes staring daggers into yours. “That is disappointing to hear. But perhaps it is my fault; I should not have imposed such a heavy burden on a neophyte to the Order.”

Mr. Sanford rises to his feet, and the other members of the Order follow suit. He addresses the other members of the Inner Circle: “All right. We have no more time to spare. The ritual must be completed at once. We shall use the same site as before—the central pillar of the Unvisited Isle, where the barrier between this world and the next is thinnest. It is likely that the anomaly will pursue us there, so act with caution.” Then he turns back to you. “We will require your assistance as well, of course. The device you hold is the key to binding the revenant. You must use it properly when the time comes. Do you understand?” You nod in affirmation. Taking a deep breath to steel your nerves, you prepare for the journey to the Unvisited Isle—a journey toward death itself.

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators kept their mementos hidden.

- Proceed to Scenario VI: Union and Disillusion.

Inner Circle 4: Carl Sanford grins and rises to his feet. “You have proven yourself a loyal asset to our Order. I believe it is time that you ascended to our Inner Circle.” You approach and kneel before Mr. Sanford. He spreads his arms wide and declares, “I hereby appoint to you the rank of Knight of the Inner Circle. Arise once more, knight, and stand tall. You are now one of the elite guardians of humanity, keepers of the truth, and stewards of the Silver Twilight Order.” Another member of the Order offers you a folded blue robe, and you don it solemnly. “Now, I am sure you have many questions for me. We do not have a lot of time to dawdle, but you deserve answers. What do you wish to know?”
You may ask up to three questions of Carl Sanford before his patience wears thin. One at a time, in any order, choose and read up to three of the following passages. Then, proceed to Inner Circle 6.

“What is the creature?”
“It is a powerful remnant, left behind from one who perished long ago. The witches could only have summoned it if they had a strong connection to the soul it once belonged to,” Mr. Sanford explains. “It could only be one person: Keziah Mason herself.”

“What do you want with the creature?”
“First and foremost, we need to bind it to prevent it from doing further harm. That is of paramount importance. Once it is bound, we may be able to learn the secrets it possesses without endangering ourselves or others.”

“What do the witches want with the creature?”
“I am sure they wish to learn its secrets, and draw from its power,” he theorizes, stroking his beard. “Perhaps allow one of their own to become possessed by the spirit, and hence gain power over life and death itself.”

“Did you know about the creature before the charity gala?”
“In truth, yes,” Mr. Sanford admits. “But we did not know it would come to us. After interceding in the witch’s summoning rite, we investigated the spectral mist that was left behind for several days. We likely drew too much attention to ourselves, and it was drawn to our presence. Not necessarily a bad thing, in the end.”

“Where are the four missing people from the charity gala?”
“God only knows,” Mr. Sanford replies with a sigh. “Taken by the revenant, perhaps. Or swallowed by the mist.” He considers this for a while, then adds, “I suspect that if they are still alive, they cannot be far from the revenant. For better or for worse, the anomaly seems localized around it.”

---

Check Campaign Log. You may only ask the following question if the investigators survived the watcher’s embrace.

“…Why are you looking at me like that?”
Mr. Sanford clears his throat. “I… It is nothing,” he lies.

Inner Circle 5: Carl Sanford gives the trinkets and strange components to another member of the Inner Circle, who retrieves them with care and brings them upstairs. “Thank you for your assistance in this matter. We are stronger together than apart; don’t you agree?”

Mr. Sanford rises to his feet, and the other members of the Order follow suit. He addresses the other members of the Inner Circle: “All right. We have no more time to spare. The ritual must be completed at once. We shall use the same site as before—the central pillar of the Unvisited Isle, where the barrier between this world and the next is thinnest. It is likely that the anomaly will pursue us there, so act with caution.” Then he turns back to you. “We will require your assistance as well, of course. The device you hold is the key to binding the revenant. You must use it properly when the time comes. Do you understand?” You nod in affirmation. Taking a deep breath to steel your nerves, you prepare for the journey to the Unvisited Isle—a journey toward death itself.

Proceed to Scenario VI: Union and Disillusion.

Inner Circle 6: Mr. Sanford rises to his feet, and the other members of the Order follow suit. He addresses the members of the Inner Circle, yourself included: “All right. We have no more time to spare. The ritual must be completed at once. We shall use the same site as before—the central pillar of the Unvisited Isle, where the barrier between this world and the next is thinnest. It is likely that the anomaly will pursue us there, so act with caution.” Then he turns directly to you and adds, “The device you hold is the key to binding the revenant. I trust you to use it properly when the time comes.” You and the other members of the circle nod in affirmation. Taking a deep breath to steel your nerves, you prepare for the journey to the Unvisited Isle—a journey toward death itself.

In your Campaign Log, record the investigators were inducted into the Inner Circle.

Proceed to Scenario VI: Union and Disillusion.
Scenario VI: Union and Disillusion

The Unvisited Isle lies in the midst of the Miskatonic River, in between two of the bridges that span the river and connect the Downtown and Rivertown neighborhoods of Arkham. Overgrown with vines, thorns, and unnatural underbrush, the island is home to no residents and very few fauna. Rows of mysterious stone pillars stand sentry throughout the island, rising high above the treetops. Though many theories abound, none know for sure what purpose these stone pillars serve, or who built them. Very few dare to venture onto the shores of the enigmatic island, and those who do return with strange tales: bonfires in the woods at the darkest hours of night—stone altars with deep carvings impossible to translate—empty woods devoid of life, save for the stark-black ravens and whippoorwills who perch on the tree branches and watch trespassers with eager eyes. Unfortunately for you, the stakes are too high for you to heed these many warnings.

The streets of Arkham are emptier and quieter than you have ever seen them before. A familiar grey mist has enveloped the town. The haze grows denser and thicker the closer you get to the river. You move with haste, not wanting to encounter any others on your way to the site of the ritual, whether they be living or dead. You find several rowboats moored by the docks and climb aboard one of them. With the waters unnaturally still and barely any current carrying the boat, rowing toward the island should be a simple endeavor. Even so, the dense fog makes it difficult for you to get your bearings. Soon, you are completely enclosed by the grey mist, unable to see the banks of the river or the coast of the island. Shapes emerge from the fog. Ripples appear on the surface of the water. The gaze of the watcher is upon you.

Just then, a pillar of spectral energy ascends into the sky, clear as day even through the haze. The shapes all turn their attention to this beacon, and you sense the watcher’s gaze slipping from your soul. The rite has begun. You row faster, using the light to guide you. It is time to decide once and for all why you have come—are you here to aid the Silver Twilight Lodge? Or to disrupt them?

This is a point of no return—you will not get the chance to change your mind later. The investigators must decide (choose one):

◉ “We have to help complete the Lodge’s ritual.” Completing the ritual should bind the Spectral Watcher and prevent it from doing any more harm.
  ◆ In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators sided with the Lodge.
  ◆ Proceed to Setup.

◉ “We have to stop the Lodge’s ritual.” Disrupting the ritual should release the Spectral Watcher’s tether to the mortal realm.
  ◆ In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators sided with the coven.
  ◆ Proceed to Setup.

Setup

◉ Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: Union and Disillusion, Inexorable Fate, Realm of Death, Spectral Predators, Ancient Evils, and Chilling Cold. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

◉ Set the following encounter sets aside, out of play: Anette’s Coven, Silver Twilight Lodge, and The Watcher. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

◉ Put the Miskatonic River and Forbidding Shore into play. Each investigator begins play at the Miskatonic River. Then, shuffle the 6 Unvisited Isle locations and choose 2 at random to put into play. Set the rest aside, out of play. (See suggested location placement below.)
  ◆ Check Campaign Log. If the investigators sided with the coven, the braziers at Forbidding Shore and both Unvisited Isle locations are already lit. Place a resource token on each of these locations to signify this. (See “Circle / Braziers,” below.)

◉ Set The Geist-Trap location and the Watcher’s Gaze treachery aside, out of play.

◉ Search the collection for Anette Mason (The Circle Undone #57) and Josef Meiger (The Circle Undone #85) and set them aside, out of play.
If you are playing in Standalone Mode and do not wish to refer to any other setup/resolutions, you may use the information below when setting up and playing this scenario:

Assemble the chaos bag using the following tokens: +1, 0, –1, –1, –2, –2, –3, –4, ♦, ♦, ♦, ♦, ♦, ♦, ♦.

All 4 profiles are “crossed off” in your Campaign Log.
The investigators were not inducted into the Inner Circle, the investigators are not deceiving the Lodge, and Josef is alive and well.

“Exile”

Some player cards must be exiled when they are used. When a card is exiled, it is removed from the game and returned to your collection. During campaign play, a card that has been exiled must be purchased again with experience points (between scenarios) if you wish to re-include it in your deck. If exiling 1 or more cards would reduce your deck below your investigator’s deck size, when purchasing cards between scenarios, you must purchase cards so that a legal deck size is maintained (when purchasing cards in this manner, you may purchase level 0 cards for 0 experience cost until a legal deck size is reached).

Check the “Missing Persons” section of the Campaign Log. Depending on which characters are crossed off and which are not, perform the following:

- If Gavriella Mizrah is not crossed off, set the Gavriella Mizrah story asset aside, and place the Gavriella’s Fate story card beneath the scenario reference card.
- If Penny White is not crossed off, set the Penny White story asset aside, and place the Penny’s Fate story card beneath the scenario reference card.
- If Jerome Davids is not crossed off, set the Jerome Davids story asset aside, and place the Jerome’s Fate story card beneath the scenario reference card.
- If Valentino Rivas is not crossed off, set the Valentino Rivas story asset aside, and place the Valentino’s Fate story card beneath the scenario reference card.
- Remove the remainder of the story assets and story cards from the Union and Disillusion encounter set from the game.

Depending on the following circumstances, a different version of Acts 3 and 4 should be used in this scenario. Each other version of Act 3 or 4 is removed from the game.

- Check Campaign Log. If the investigators sided with the Lodge, use Act 3— “Beyond the Mist (v. I)” and Act 4— “The Binding Rite.”
- If the investigators sided with the coven, the investigators are deceiving the Lodge, and the investigators were inducted into the Inner Circle, use Act 3— “Beyond the Mist (v. II)” and Act 4— “The Broken Rite.”
- If the above is not true, the investigators sided with the coven, and at least two of the following is true: the investigators are deceiving the Lodge, the investigators hid their knowledge of the coven, or the investigators kept their mementos hidden, use Act 3— “Beyond the Mist (v. III)” and Act 4— “The Broken Rite.”
- If the above is not true and the investigators sided with the coven, use Act 3— “Beyond the Mist (v. IV)” and Act 4— “The Broken Rite.”

Check Campaign Log. For each heretic that was unleashed unto Arkham, place 1 doom on agenda 1a.

Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.
Circle / Braziers

Throughout this scenario, you will find locations with braziers on them, which can be lit or unlit using the ability with the Circle action designator on that location. A Circle ability is always used to either light or unlight the brazier on that location, and serves no other function. Lighting braziers is an important step in completing the ritual set up by the Silver Twilight Lodge. Whether you want braziers lit or unlit depends on whether you plan on aiding the Lodge or thwarting them.

- Skill tests on Circle actions often require an investigator to test multiple skills at once (such as “Test 🕰️+.setScale”). Such a test is considered to be a test of both skill types. Cards with either skill icon may be committed to the test, and both icons are considered matching skill icons.
- If the brazier on a location is lit, place a resource token on that location to signify that the brazier on that location has been lit.
- If the brazier on a location is unlit, remove the resource token from that location, to signify that the brazier on that location is no longer lit.
- If a Circle action is unsuccessful, nothing happens.
- A lit brazier on a location has no game effect on its own, although other card effects may reference whether or not the brazier on your location is lit.
- A brazier only has two states: lit or unlit. Lighting the brazier on a location with an already lit brazier has no effect, as does unlighting a brazier on a location with no lit brazier.

Note: If the investigators sided with the coven, Forbidding Shore and the 2 Unvisited Isle locations should each begin play with a resource token, to signify that the braziers on those locations are already lit.
If no resolution was reached (each investigator resigned or was defeated): You barely remember sprinting back to shore and getting in your rowboat. It is as though you were possessed—by a fit of madness or by a spirit bent only on survival, you cannot say. You are shaken to your senses by the powerful gale which sweeps across the river, almost capsizing your boat. The spectral pillar marking the site of the Lodge’s ritual suddenly bursts outward. Dozens of specters and phantasmal shapes fly across the treetops and glide across the water. You will never forget their shrieks, like hundreds of deathcries sounding at once.

Skip to Resolution 5.

Resolution 1: The revenant thrashes and writhes in torment, unable to escape with its connection to the spectral realm torn away. Carl Sanford steps forward, opens a thick leather tome, and the ghost’s memories—along with the remainder of its form—are unceremoniously pulled into its pages.

“What have you done?!” Anette yells. Several members of her coven surround her. They are embattled, but you have no doubt they would lay down their life to protect their high priestess from harm.

“What have I done? Why, I have cheated the Devil,” Sanford responds with a sinister grin. You notice the words of his tome are now glowing with a spectral radiance. “Keziah signed the Black Book of Azathoth in order to learn the secrets of the universe. A fatal error, in my estimation, for it put her in the clutches of one far more powerful than she.” He begins to read from the pages as he explains further. “She paid the price, but I shall reap the harvest.”

Anette clenches her jaw and turns toward you. “You cannot even begin to fathom the secrets this monster now possesses. Do you truly believe he will use this power for good?” She asks.

The investigators must decide (choose one):

Yes.” Proceed to Resolution 2. You may choose this option only if the investigators were inducted into the Inner Circle, and cannot choose this option if the investigators are deceiving the Lodge.

No.” Skip to Resolution 3.
Resolution 4: Anette approaches, confronting the remnant’s ethereal shell. “Sister! We are the ones who have called you here from the great beyond.” The shattered revenant turns its attention to Anette, and the rest of her coven watch in anticipation.

“What are you doing, you fool? This spirit is no mere witch!” Carl Sanford yells out. But it is too late. Anette ignores Mr. Sanford, continuing to speak with the spectral presence. “For years we have suffered injustice after injustice. Share with me your secrets, sister. Together, as one mind, body, and soul, we can begin anew.”

The ghost reaches out to her with a long, skeletal arm. Anette’s sisters gasp as their high priestess steps forward and kneels before the being, offering herself. With a sudden rush of energy, the phantom soul is drawn inside Anette. She collapses to the ground, reeling from the spiritual impact. Her body writhes in torment, but none of the other witches step forward to help, instead watching with equal parts terror and fascination. Finally, Anette rises to her feet, her eyes aglow with mystical power. When she speaks, it is not her voice. “Sisters. Rejoice, for I am reborn,” Keziah says.

Carl Sanford taps you with his cane. You were so transfixed by the events occurring in front of you that you hadn’t noticed the Lodge members slinking toward the edges of the clearing. One of the Lodge’s inner circle raises a revolver and attempts to fire, but the high priestess simply glares at him, and his arm withers and rots before your eyes. His gun clatters to the ground and he makes one final croak before he is nothing but a decayed husk on the ground. “We must leave this place at once,” Sanford says stoically. “This being possesses power over life and death itself. It will not suffer our presence any longer.”

Anette—no, Keziah—turns her attention to you, and her eyes brighten. “You look familiar, child. Come, come. Do not be afraid. You have nothing to fear from me.” She grins wickedly. Her voice is like knives driving into your soul. You hate to admit it, but Sanford is right. You turn and flee with the rest of the Lodge, hoping you are fast enough to escape the witch’s magic.

Your escape is a blur. Witches and spirits chase you relentlessly throughout the forsaken woods. You are only barely able to make it back to the shore before they catch up to you. Other members of the Lodge are perhaps not so fortunate. Having scattered in many directions, you’re not sure how many of them escaped, and you don’t see Carl Sanford anywhere, though you suspect he had a plan for this outcome.

In your Campaign Log, record Anette Mason is possessed by evil.

Skip to Resolution 8.

Resolution 5: Check Campaign Log. Compare the following two columns to see which has the most true statements.

- The witches’ spell was broken.
- The investigators rescued Josef / Josef is alive and well.
- The investigators released 1 or fewer heretics were unleashed unto Arkham.

- The witches’ spell was cast.
- Josef disappeared into the mist.
- 2 or more heretics were unleashed unto Arkham.

If the left column has more true statements than the right column, proceed to Resolution 6. If the right column has more true statements than the left column, proceed to Resolution 7.
Resolution 6: When you come to your senses, the wind has subsided and the dark mist has vanished. With the ritual concluded, the island seems to have returned to normal—but was the ritual successful, or did it fail? You make your way to the center of the island to find out what happened. As you arrive, you find Anette and her coven heavily wounded, and the Lodge stands victorious. Carl Sanford holds a thick leather tome in his hands, its pages glowing with arcane power. “What have you done?!” Anette yells. Several members of her coven surround her. They are embattled, but you have no doubt they would lay down their life to protect their high priestess from harm.

“What have I done? Why, I have cheated the Devil,” Sanford responds with a sinister grin. You notice the words of his tome are now glowing with a spectral radiance. “Keziah signed the Black Book of Azathoth in order to learn the secrets of the universe. A fatal error, in my estimation, for it put her in the clutches of one far more powerful than she.” He begins to read from the pages as he explains further. “She paid the price, but I shall reap the harvest.”

Anette clenches her jaw and turns toward you. “Listen to me. You cannot even begin to fathom the secrets this monster now possesses. You must stop him, no matter the cost.”

You hold your tongue, but in the back of your mind, you suspect Anette is right. Sanford has tricked you. This is what he was after all along. Perhaps he considers this “protecting humanity,” but the truth is that he has endangered the lives of others over and over again in order to serve his own greed and lust for power. However, before you can confront Sanford, he turns to the other members of his Order and points to you. “This one is no longer useful,” he explains. “Kill them all.”

“Erynn, give us cover!” Anette barks to the red-haired witch next to her. The witch nods in response and waves a wooden rod in front of her, creating a cloud of mist that masks your presence. “We have to get out of here. Go!” Anette yells.

Your escape is a blur. Robed members of the Silver Twilight cult chase you relentlessly throughout the forsaken woods. You are only barely able to make it back to the shore before they catch up to you. You motion for Anette and the others to join you, but she shakes her head. “We’ll meet again soon.” The edges of the witches’ cloaks bleed into the night sky, and with a swirl of darkness, they vanish one by one.

In your Campaign Log, record Carl Sanford possesses the secrets of the universe.

Skip to Resolution 8.
Resolution 7: When you come to your senses, the wind has subsided and the dark mist has vanished. With the ritual concluded, the island seems to have returned to normal—but was the ritual successful, or did it fail? You make your way to the center of the island to find out what happened. As you arrive, you find Carl Sanford and the other members of his Order heavily wounded, and Anette and her coven stand victorious. Anette stands at the center of the clearing, her eyes aglow with mystical power. When she speaks, it is not her voice. “Sisters. Rejoice, for I am reborn,” Keziah says.

Carl Sanford taps you with his cane. You were so transfixed by the events occurring in front of you that you hadn’t noticed the Lodge members slinking toward the edges of the clearing. One of the Lodge’s inner circle raises a revolver and attempts to fire, but the high priestess simply glares at him, and his arm withers and rots before your eyes. His gun clatters to the ground and he makes one final croak before he is nothing but a decayed husk on the ground. “We must leave this place at once,” Sanford says stoically. “This being possesses power over life and death itself. It will not suffer our presence any longer.”

Anette—no, Keziah—turns her attention to you, and her eyes brighten. “You look familiar, child. Come, come. Do not be afraid. You have nothing to fear from me.” She grins wickedly. Her voice is like knives driving into your soul. You hate to admit it, but Sanford is right. You turn and flee with the rest of the Lodge, hoping you are fast enough to escape the witch’s magic.

Your escape is a blur. Witches and spirits chase you relentlessly throughout the forsaken woods. You are only barely able to make it back to the shore before they catch up to you. Other members of the Lodge are perhaps not so fortunate. Having scattered in many directions, you’re not sure how many of them escaped, and you don’t see Carl Sanford anywhere, though you suspect he had a plan for this outcome.

In your Campaign Log, record Anette Mason is possessed by evil.

Proceed to Resolution 8.

Resolution 8: When you finally return to the banks of the Miskatonic River, you take stock of the situation...

If an investigator’s deck contains the Puzzle Box card, remove it from that investigator’s deck.

Check the “Missing Persons” section of your Campaign Log.

- If Gavriella is alive, any one investigator may choose to add the Gavriella Mizrah asset to his or her deck. She does not count toward that investigator’s deck size. Otherwise, next to Gavriella Mizrah’s profile, record Gavriella is dead.

- If Jerome is alive, any one investigator may choose to add the Jerome Davids asset to his or her deck. He does not count toward that investigator’s deck size. Otherwise, next to Jerome Davids’s profile, record Jerome is dead.

- If Penny is alive, any one investigator may choose to add the Penny White asset to his or her deck. She does not count toward that investigator’s deck size. Otherwise, next to Penny White’s profile, record Penny is dead.

- If Valentino is alive, any one investigator may choose to add the Valentino Rivas asset to his or her deck. He does not count toward that investigator’s deck size. Otherwise, next to Valentino Rivas’s profile, record Valentino is dead.

Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>PLAYER NAME</th>
<th>PLAYER NAME</th>
<th>PLAYER NAME</th>
<th>PLAYER NAME</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>INVESTIGATOR</td>
<td>INVESTIGATOR</td>
<td>INVESTIGATOR</td>
<td>INVESTIGATOR</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>UNSPENT EXPERIENCE</td>
<td>UNSPENT EXPERIENCE</td>
<td>UNSPENT EXPERIENCE</td>
<td>UNSPENT EXPERIENCE</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TRAUMA (Physical)</td>
<td>TRAUMA (Physical)</td>
<td>TRAUMA (Physical)</td>
<td>TRAUMA (Physical)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TRAUMA (Mental)</td>
<td>TRAUMA (Mental)</td>
<td>TRAUMA (Mental)</td>
<td>TRAUMA (Mental)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>EARNED STORY ASSETS/WEAKNESSES</td>
<td>EARNED STORY ASSETS/WEAKNESSES</td>
<td>EARNED STORY ASSETS/WEAKNESSES</td>
<td>EARNED STORY ASSETS/WEAKNESSES</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Campaign Notes

Mementos Discovered
Missing Persons

Prologue

The Witching Hour

At Death's Doorstep (Act 1)

~ A Record of Those Lost

At Death's Doorstep (Acts 2–3)

~ The Price of Progress

The Secret Name

The Wages of Sin

For the Greater Good

Union and Disillusion

In the Clutches of Chaos

~ Twist of Fate

Before the Black Throne

~ Epilogue

Epilogue

Twist of Fate

Missing Persons

Killed and Insane Investigators

- Gavriella Mizrah
- Jerome Davids
- Penny White
- Valentino Rivas
Encounter Set Icons

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Icon</th>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Icon</th>
<th>Name</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td><img src="image1" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>Aagents of Azathoth</td>
<td><img src="image2" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>Realm of Death</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td><img src="image3" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>Anette’s Coven</td>
<td><img src="image4" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>Secrets of the Universe</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td><img src="image5" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>At Death’s Doorstep</td>
<td><img src="image6" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>Silver Twilight Lodge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td><img src="image7" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>Before the Black Throne</td>
<td><img src="image8" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>Spectral Predators</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td><img src="image9" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>City of Sins</td>
<td><img src="image10" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>The Secret Name</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td><img src="image11" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>Disappearance at the Twilight Estate</td>
<td><img src="image12" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>The Wages of Sin</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td><img src="image13" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>For the Greater Good</td>
<td><img src="image14" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>The Watcher</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td><img src="image15" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>In the Clutches of Chaos</td>
<td><img src="image16" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>The Witching Hour</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td><img src="image17" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>Inexorable Fate</td>
<td><img src="image18" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>Trapped Spirits</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td><img src="image19" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>Music of the Damned</td>
<td><img src="image20" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>Union and Disillusion</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td><img src="image21" alt="Image" /></td>
<td>Witchcraft</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>